Farm Bureau Meet At Bend Airs Farmer Problems

The board of directors meeting of the Oregon Farm Bureau federation held in Bend Sunday, Aug. 3, was attended by Regional Director Ted Morgan of Nyssa. He was accompanied by Mrs. Jake Borge, of Adrian, regional farm bureau women's chairman, who attended the state meeting of the advisory council Saturday evening and Sunday morning. Emil Maag, of Willowcreek, Malheur county voting delegate, attended the house of delegates meeting in Bend Monday and Tuesday.

It was explained at the meeting of the women's advisory council the part women are to take in the farm bureau structure, such part being to assist in an active, organized way in carrying forward the programs of the farm bureau; to promote, strengthen and assist in every possible legal manner the development of the business, economic, social, educational and spiritual interests of the farm families of the nation; to develop agriculture and to provide a means whereby rural women of the United States may participate in national and international councils of women.

At the board of directors meeting there were speakers for and against the milk control law. The Safeway Stores' representative spoke for a change in the law covering producer protection, according to Morgan. Measures to be on the ballot this fall were discussed and plans made to explain them to the public.

The Oregon farm bureau resolutions for this fall's convention were discussed and tentative changes made at the house of delegates' meeting. Maag reported the decisions made by Malheur county on the school reorganization bill and a resolution on property tax to the resolutions committee.

These resolutions, with tentative alterations, will be brought back to the centers for their approval before being presented to the county and then returned to the state board of delegates in November.

Columbia Salmon Bag Now Uniform

Oregon and Washington salmon bag limits for sports fishermen on the Columbia river are uniform for the first time this year.

The uniform ruling allowing six salmon per day, of which not more than two may be over 24 inches, was effective July 1 and ends Oct. 12 when Oregon returns to its usual daily bag of two fish over 20 inches.

Dates selected by the Oregon game commission for the period of uniform regulations on the Columbia include the peak fall Chinook fishing in September.

In past years, Oregon anglers felt they were penalized by dual fishing rules on the Columbia river that allowed Washington anglers six salmon and Oregon anglers only two fish.

The Federalists and the Republicans were the first two major political parties. Applause from the galleries is not permitted in Congress.

Labor Leaders Meet Tonight At Ontario

Frank Russell, of Parma, president of the group, has announced that all union members and other individuals interested in labor problems are invited to attend.

The labor legislature program for the 1953 legislature and organizational problems will be presented and discussed, according to John Rhoads, of Ontario, secretary.

WIENEKE'S VACATION IN NORTHERN IDAHO, OREGON

Mr. and Mrs. Ward Wieneke and boys spent last week vacationing in Northern Idaho and Oregon. They visited at Couer d'Alene and with Mrs. Wieneke's niece and nephew, hatchery flight strip has been completed, and fish plants are now being made in Umpqua and Rogue river national forest lakes from the Fort Klamath air strip.

Tiny fingerling trout are flown to the high lakes, most of them accessible only by trail, in a Piper super cub fitted with special belly tanks and an aeration system. Sam Whitney, Newberg, has piloted the fish run for the past four years, with fishery agents Reino Koski and John Dimick handling transport of fish from the hatchery to air strip and over-all planting.

Heaviest aerial plant was an allocation of 500,000 rainbow and 300,000 eastern brook trout to Waldo lake, a 5500 acre body of wilderness-surfounded water on the crest of the Cascade range.

A two-man game commission survey crew outfitted with pack animals is checking on fish populations in many of the remote Cascade lakes to determine trout survival, fish growth rates and numbers and fishing success resulting from the aerial stocking program.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Williams at Avery, Idaho. The remainder of their trip included Wallowa Lake and a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCurdy at Enterprise.
