

How-to-do-it Tops Theme of Library Books Out Sat.

The books going into circulation on Saturday, Sept. 5, at the Malheur County Library include the subjects of dairy cattle, language, music, photography, and astronomy. There are three novels and a further variety of non-fiction also in the group.

Fitting and Showing Dairy Cattle by Jack Spearing includes chapters on foot trimming, clipping, horn training and polishing, and going to the fair.

Words and Ways of American English describes the origins, growth, and present state of English as it has developed in the United States. The author, Thomas Pyles, discusses in readable fashion coinages, adaptations, and adoptions from foreign tongues.

The Complete Book of Twentieth Century Music by David Even analyzes the most important works of leading contemporary composers and evaluates the major forms, trends, movements, and techniques. "The book of enlarging" is the subtitle of Bigger and Better, a book for the photographer by Don Nibbelink which guides him from simple print making to advanced control processes such as monochrome-dye printing.

Pictorial Astronomy by Dinsmore Alter and Clarence Clemishaw is written for the layman to answer questions most often asked. Including many illustrations, the book explains the Northern lights, seasons and climates, eclipses, and comets, and gives information on the sun, moon, earth, planets, and stars. It also has a chapter on "Some Famous Telescopes."

A long novel of 16th-century England, "The Man on a Donkey" by Hilda F. M. Prescott chronicles the lives of five main persons and the North Country rebellion of 1536.

Paul Wellman's "The Comancheros" is a story of how Paul Regret, erstwhile gambler, became a member of the Texas Rangers and a part of that organization's attempt to unearth the identity and hideout of the Comancheros who were behind the frontier raids of the Comanches.

Peter Hunt's "How-to-do-it Book" shows how to use paint and brush, color and design to turn discarded furniture into new personalized pieces and to make other items useful and gay.

The Guide to Good Hunting and Trapping published by Popular Mechanics and written by Joe Godfrey is a well-illustrated volume with sections on hunting game animals, hunting game birds, guns and ammunition, the hunting dog, and trapping the fur bearers.

Ruth Gannon's book on Decorating with House Plants also gives information on growing various plants, forcing bulbs for indoor bloom, pruning, and growing from seed.

Land for Tomorrow by L. Dudley Stamp is sub-titled "The Underdeveloped World," and in it the author discusses world land use, and the need for more efficient utilization of underdeveloped land in the middle latitudes.

A manual brought up to date in its second edition is the Handbook of Engineering edited by O. W. Eshbach.

City is a collection of science fiction stories by Clifford Simak.

OREGON FARMERS URGED TO MAKE SOIL CHECK FOR FERTILIZER NEEDS

Farmers can profit now by taking inventory of soil conditions which will be helpful in putting in next year's crops, says Howard Cushman, extension soils specialist at Oregon State college.

Uneven stands of grains that are still on the land or notes on recently harvested patches of light-yielding forage and seed crops will help locate hard spots, sandy areas, and poor drainage which should receive attention before wet weather.

A spot check now will give an index for preparing seed beds and applying fertilizer for next year. This will be especially helpful in Western Oregon for lime applications, according to the specialist.

Soil tests for lime recommendations can normally be completed by the Oregon State college soil testing laboratory and returned to farmers within two weeks, Cushman says farmers who would like these and other soil tests made in time for next year's crop should contact county extension agents for instructions on taking soil samples.

Nitrogen deficiency may show up in crops that had a pale color and didn't grow well, even though they received plenty of water--especially if the land hasn't been in a legume recently. Another example cited by the specialist is low-yielding alfalfa that had plenty of water, was free of disease, but may need more phosphate.

Adequate fertilizer supplies are expected for the coming year, but Cushman advises farmers to place orders early to make sure fertilizer of the right analysis is on hand when needed. Heavy demands for one type of fertilizer in a certain area can cause last-minute local shortages
