Review Board Is Announced For Beef Issue

Mailed ballots in the beef commission referendum are expected to pour into the state department of agriculture immediately after Feb. 10, Director of Agriculture Robert J. Stewart has announced. More than 4000 producers who registered prior to Jan. 21 are eligible to vote.

To be counted, ballots must be postmarked to the department at Salem by Feb. 24 or be deposited by that date in an official ballot box in the office of any Oregon county extension agent, he said.

Because of the wide interest and broad coverage of this referendum and the heavy vote expected, Steward said arrangements have been made with two prominent Oregonians to serve as a reviewing board for the ballots cast.

One of these is David O'Hara, who retired last year after more than 40 years as head of the elections division for the state of Oregon. The other is E. R. Jackman, Oregon State college range specialist for many years, with wide acquaintance throughout Oregon's cattle industry.

All votes will be cast in sealed ballot envelopes which will be opened and tabulated only at the department headquarters in Salem, Steward said. The reviewing board will check all votes cast upon the close of the referendum period.
