RELIGION IN LIFE

By the Rev. Paul Ludlow

There were strangers in church Sunday. The hometown folk moved over in the pew and offered them a hymn book. It was good to see them join in the singing of "Holy, Holy, Holy," then turn to the responsive reading. After the service there were greetings and invitations to come again.

We too have dropped in on church services far removed from the home base and have discovered the warmth of Christian fellowship. Ours is a great fraternity with no barriers of class or station. As people increasingly take to the road for vacations or business they find these spiritual service stations available and satisfying.

Whether you find yourself in a great cathedral with organ and professional choirs or in a village church where Sunday school precedes morning worship in the same room, you may still hear the "word of the Lord," thrill to the singing of hymns of faith and bow in humility and thankfulness before our Maker.
