Last year, Idaho farmer Roger A. Thompson tried an experiment. He used USS Nitrogen Fertilizers for the first time on his farm in the Rupert, Idaho area. This experiment will be general practice now he has seen the results.

Mr. Thompson used nitrogen on potatoes, sugar beets and irrigated wheat. He harvested more than 300 sacks of potatoes, 23 tons of sugar beets and 86 bushels of wheat per acre.

"I tried USS Nitrogen Fertilizers on part of the land," said Mr. Thompson, "and where I used it, there was as much difference as between night and day. We can't get along without it here."

Without nitrogen, I do not think we would have gotten half the crop we did. Nitrogen surely makes a difference," Mr. Thompson said.

Mr. Thompson used 120 pounds of available N per acre on his potatoes, 127 pounds of N per acre on sugar beets and 100 pounds of N on irrigated wheat land.
