

Ontario Bridges Contract Friday

The Oregon State Highway commission will receive bids Friday for construction of two parallel bridges over the Snake river about one and one-half miles south of Ontario, it was announced this week.

The structures will be 968 feet long with 30-foot roadways separated 100 feet center to center. The bridges will be constructed of reinforced concrete on welded steel girders and each will require six piers on the river and one on each bank.

The upstream structure is scheduled for completion during the summer of 1959 and the other the summer of 1960.

Irrigation Canals Nearing Capacity

brought nearly double the normal amount of rainfall, increasing the water outlook from adequate to abundant supplies for this season's irrigation from all reservoirs. Some late season shortages can be expected in low elevation watersheds unless adequate June rains occur.

An unusual increase in snow-cover occurred during April at high elevations on two snow courses: Blue Mountain Springs on the Malheur river and Jacks Peak on the Owyhee. Cold night temperatures have retarded snow-melt at high elevations, leaving an abnormally heavy snow-pack in the high mountain areas.

Watershed soils are all exceptionally well wetted and will contribute toward a better than usual sustained flow in all streams, Frost said.

Reservoirs are full or spilling to make room for inflow yet to come. For two successive years the large storage reservoir of Malheur county have received much more water than they can store. There should be good hold-over storage for next season's operation.

Irrigation season flow of the Malheur river near Drewsey is forecast at 151 percent of average. Jordan creek will have much above average flow. Late season flow of Bully creek will fall off a little early.

On a statewide basis, April precipitation, much above normal in many areas, has added to the already adequate or abundant water supplies available for Oregon farmers. High mountain snow cover is well above average and reservoir water supplies are excellent.
