Too Many Pills for Recovery

Oregon's basic school support funds and the political promises of "more and more state funds to help the taxpayers" are much like the story of the patient who was so pleased with his doctor's orders he wanted to improve upon them.

It seems the patient was ordered by his doctor to take one pill a day for complete recovery in six days, so the patient decided if he took two pills a day he would be completely well in three days! There's no denying the mathematical reasoning is sound.

Basic school funds from the state are necessary in this day and age of better schools and better education, but the "two-pills-a-day theory" is proving that school problems, like illness, cannot be cured in half the normal time by theory.

School patrons at Nyssa, Ontario, Vale and nine other districts in Malheur county are benefitting this year with more state funds and lower local levies because of a $15 per census child increase voted by the 1957 legislature. Those of us living in any of the benefitting districts might feel we are getting a bargain, but what about the 15 smaller districts, including two at Adrian, where the increased child support reduced their state aid and in turn forces the districts to increase local taxes?

A vast majority of the patrons of most of these 15 districts are farmers who are paying through the nose to help those of us in the 12 benefitting districts save with lower millage rates. We don't believe farmers want any special favors tax-wise, but neither do we believe that we should have special favors with reduced taxes at their expense.

The $10 per child increase proposed by the 1957 legislature might have been justified, but the $15 increase seems to have been the extra two pills that are going to make a lot of patients very sick.
