folded. They said there was no particular maliciousness of fore-thought involved but they were motivated by a desire to remind someone that the flag should be removed every evening by sundown, and since the one in front of the city hall had been flying day and night since last Memorial day they thought they should lower it. Of course, since this routine, someone has been found that says that's not quite true, the flag has been down since last Memorial day. It seems he found it wrapped around a limb one day so he took it down, unwrapped it, and put it back up. Well, it was taken down, anyway.
