a few minutes with a small package and the comment, "That will be $3, please."

Almost got showered with buck-shot for comments last week about the Western Oregon hunter who wants to hunt on the lot at the corner of Main and South First. It seems the Chamber of Commerce will soon be asked to help promote this area for a wildlife refuge for pheasants, chukars, deer and bear. I'm told the game animals could propagate without disturbance from Nyssans or the rest of the outside world —nobody could see the forest for the weeds.

Guess I'm gonna have trouble with the boss and/or the police.
Usually when I come down town I want to be a good citizen and obey the two-hour parking limit and double parking restrictions.
So... I try to use Nyssa's alleys to reach an off-street parking area, but condition of the alleys with their ruts, rocks, broken glass, nails and barbed wire makes the Owyhee Lake road seem like a paved highway. Am making arrangements to send in my copy by carrier pigeon.

Sense of humor—what makes you laugh at something that would make you mad if it happened to you.

The boss is all shook up. He's actually grieving about the two gubernatorial candidates who are running on "poor men's tickets." Between sobs he told me about the pleas (please) from the two headquarters for free publicity and the fact that both men are so poor they can't pay for advertising. The pitiful letters are accompanied by beautiful brochures lithographed in Portland — or maybe Seattle — and hints about paid TV broadcasts in Portland and the high-cost of sign-board advertising.

Both candidates have newspaper men writing their ballyhoo with a lot of this personal "fellow publisher," "for the good of the cause," "we understand each other," etc.

We do understand!

Next year I'm not going to bother with a column. I'll head somebody's campaign and contact all local lawyers for free legal advice, the mechanics to tell me what's wrong with my candidate's car and the doctors to give me hopeful a health check up—then go to Portland and pay for the services I got free in Malheur county.

It's like the man said, give they will try to pull something.
