Girl Scout NEWS

Troop 4 Activities

Girl Scouts of troop 4 have been working on their second class rank badges with several activities. One patrol presented skits learned at Scout camp and another dramatized "The Three Little Pigs." Each has taken part in a flag ceremony at troop meetings, have taken care of animals and several have learned to patch.

The girls hiked to Taylor's Grove north of Nyssa in October. They made their lunch bags they carried on their belts. For their International Friendship, Mrs. Don Graham visited them, telling about Girl Guides in England and interesting information about her country.

The troop had a masquerade Halloween party with decorations, games and refreshments furnished by different committees, supervised by their leaders, Mrs. Joe Cundall and Mrs. Cecil Richards.

Nyssa Library Puts New Books Into Circulation

NON-FICTION

The Great West, edited with notes and introduction by Charles Neider. Here is the real story of the American West told by the men who discovered and created it. In 250,000 words of the first-hand accounts and more than 100 illustrations and maps, the whole pageant of the American West emerges in complete and accurate detail.

The Ugly American by William J. Lederer and Eugene Burdick. Stories of a certain group of Americans in Southeast Asia—their failures and heroism, their humors and passions, their drama in a land of turmoil.

Go With God by Jim Bishop, who tells of a great ordeal in his own life and what his religion meant to him during it. Returning from Italy aboard ship, he learned that his wife was critically ill in America. He tells of his desperate but unsuccessful attempts to reach her bedside before she died.

Norman Vincent Peale, a biography by Arthur Gordon, describes his early years in a mid-western environment steeped in the tradition of a conservative, yet progressive America. It points up the early decisions he faced and the goals he set for himself while still a young minister.

Anne Frank: The Diary of a Young Girl with an introduction by Eleanor Roosevelt. Anne Frank's account of the changes wrought upon eight people hiding out from the Nazis for two years during the occupation of Holland.

Victorine by Frances Parkinson Keyes. Victorine, a beautiful and self-willed girl, had heretofore divided her time between travel and sojourns in New York and large continental cities. Major adjustments are perforce indicated, but Moise tries to convince Victorine that the regional life of the Deep South is an enchanting as well as an important part of her heritage. He is therefore greatly pleased when a chance meeting between Victorine and Prosper Villac results in an immediate attraction.

A World of Strangers by Nadine Gordimer. The divided world of South Africa is seen through the eyes of Tobias Hood, a young Englishman who takes up life in Johannesburg. Toby Hood is 26, a graduate of Oxford, the product of liberal household—and a rebel. He is a rebel against causes and involvements, the abstractions of race and politics. He wants to enjoy what is left of the privileged life of the privileged class.

Mr. Robbins Again by Edward Streeter. Mr. Horace Robbins, a suburban New Yorker, is Edward Streeter's latest windmill jouster. Mr. Robbins' principal reason for going to a dude ranch is to become better acquainted with his 9-year-old grandson, but he reckons not the forces pitted against him. The Robbins set forth, unsuspectingly, in their station wagon, with Bobby and their friends, the Wellers.

An Episode of Sparrows by Rumer Gooden. In Catford street, London, there was not so much Coming Events . . .

CARD OF THANKS

We would like to thank our many friends and neighbors, those who furnished airplanes and especially the Woods' for their help during the search for our missing boys.

The Edmond Roberts family, the Fred Roberts family and the Ross Browns.

VISITS FROM WASHINGTON

William Level of Davenport, Wn., visited during the past week at the home of his sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Smith.

as a blade of grass, nothing that was not man-made. The poor streets of a big city hide earth and earth's power of growth under bricks, mortar, asphalt and paving stones. An episode of Sparrows is the story of how two of the street children made a garden in these unpromising surroundings.

MYSTERIES

Shadows on the Water by Elizabeth Cadell. Kate Verney, one of Mrs. Cadell's most delightful types, is first seen on the boat train from London. She is off to visit her daughter and new grandson in Buenos Aires—though she doesn't quite make it in the pages of this book.

The Man in Gray by Frances Crane. Everyone at the dinner party in the ancient mansion on Russian Hill, San Francisco, looked forward to a treat when D. V. Wilcox, wealthy winegrower, opened a bottle of vintage port. Instead, he fell dead after one sip—and Pat and Jean Abbott were brought into one of the most fiendishly clever murder puzzles of their career.

WESTERN

The Marshal by Frank Gruber. Tad Shay was supposed to be dead. The detail arrived to bury him in the morning but his eyes were open. His will to live had kept him alive through the last night of the Civil War.

Wyoming Manhunt by Allan Vaughn Elston, his real name is Homer Hatch. No one on the side of the law knows his assumed name, but three men are determined to find out. Kim Sallee, deputy sheriff, wants him for a two-year-old murder, Brad Lantry seeks personal revenge for the cold-blooded killing of his aunt and uncle. Stran Garwood is looking for the man who murdered his father. . . . and the murderer could be Hatch.

Sagebrush Swindle by Peter Field. When Pat Stevens welcomes Ben Bostock and his niece into his Lazy Mare ranch, he isn't looking for trouble, he just wants to sell some cattle to Bostock. It doesn't occur to him that something is wrong—even when Ez and Sam take one look at the big, blustery rancher and disappear.
