The "On to Oregon Cavalcade", in commemoration of Oregon's 100th year as a State, is coming! I am happy to say that the New York Life Insurance Company, one of the first companies to insure the pioneer families who ventured west, has insured the lives of members of the wagon train. These policies cover death due to natural causes and "all perils of the plains, incidental to travel by wagon train, including death due to starvation, buffalo stampede, scalping, burning at the stake and Indian wrestling."

As the New York Life Agent serving this area it will be my privilege to certify that the members of the cavalcade have safely completed this stage of the arduous and perilous passage to Oregon.
