Oregon Dairymen Plan Jan. 11-13 Annual Meetings

The need for Oregon milk producers to stabilize milk prices by forming larger bargaining groups or obtaining a federal milk marketing order will be discussed at the 66th annual meeting of the Oregon Dairymen's association Jan. 11 to 13 at Ontario.

Dr. S. Kent Christensen, Oregon State college agricultural economist, will bring dairymen up to date on marketing changes in the dairy industry affecting such things as the stability of prices to milk producers.

Secretary Harold Ewalt, OSC extension dairy specialist, says the meeting at the Moore hotel will run the gamut of problems facing dairymen including a talk on milk sanitation and antibiotics by Dr. Paul Elliker, head of the OSC bacteriology department.

Elliker, who attended the International Dairy Congress last summer in London and who spent six weeks helping set up a model milk plant in Spain, also will tell about milk products abroad.

The national dairy situation will be reported by R. E. Bursleson, federal extension dairyman from Washington, D.C. Bursleson also is scheduled to talk at Dairy Herd Improvement association meetings in Marion county Jan. 15, and in Linn county on Jan. 16.

Dairy herd improvement will be reviewed by Bursleson and Don Anderson, OSC extension dairy specialist. Dick Hammond, manager of Farmers Co-op Creamery, Payette, Idaho, will tell how a cooperative handles milk. Cecil Griggs, milk producer in southwestern Idaho, will speak on milk pooling.
