Declaration FOR Independence

Declaring that "there is no such thing as world law," Clarence Manion, vice chairman of For America, former professor of international law at Notre Dame university and dean of the college of law, has assured the Senate Foreign Relations committee that "the rule of the world" under the International Court of Justice as urged by President Eisenhower is "sheer fantasy."

Testifying against repeal of the Connally amendment (which protects the U.S. against the compulsory jurisdiction of the World court in domestic matters), Dean Manion said:

"We are asked to give the International court unreserved jurisdiction over all American affairs because of the good influential example that this surrender will provide for the cause of world peace. Although the Communist plunderbund has refused to submit itself to any part of the jurisdiction of the International court, it has nevertheless placed two of its judges, so called, on the 15-judge International court, where they are now ready and eager to sit in judgment upon the right of the U.S. to retain its naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, to keep the American flag flying in the Panama Canal zone and to protect its expensive ring of military bases in half a hundred countries of the world."

In concluding his protest against the repealer sponsored by Hubert Humphrey and endorsed by the president, Dean Manion urged the senators to be realistic. "Let us face it," he said. "Neither peace nor law is possible for a world that is locked in a death struggle between freedom and Communism. We can think about 'world peace through world law' only after the diabolical menace of the Communist conspiracy has been swept from the face of the earth. In the meantime we will have all we can do to preserve this country and its freedom-protecting Constitutional system from complete destruction. This is no time to let down our guard. Senate Resolution No. 94 should be defeated."

This fantastic proposal constitutes more than letting down our guard. It is surrender. If the senate would destroy America it has only to pass this measure.
