County Candidates Heard Tuesday At Chamber Meet

Two candidates for county office, Earl Flock for county commissioner, and Mary Graham for county judge, were guests at the Tuesday meeting of the Nyssa Chamber of Commerce.

Flock is presently serving as ommissioner as an appointee replacing George Cleaver, resigned due to ill health, and is Republican candidate for the regular erm in the November election. Graham is running for county udge on a write-in basis following a narrow defeat in the last primary.

Commissioner Flock said the ounty expected an increase in the county welfare load soon and that it was the plan now that those receiving aid who were able o work would be asked to do so with the county furnishing transportation to and from the work project.

Cities Asked to Cooperate

He said that the work would probably start around Dec. 1 and that if a man received a $40 welfare check he would be expected to work 40 hours. The cities will be asked to cooperate and try to find worthwhile projects that would not interfere with the regularly employed. If work could be found near each city it would cut down on the transportation expense for the county. He invited the public to call on him at any time he could be of assistance.

Graham gave a brief personal background from her childhood in the county through her work in the armed forces.
