

Fire Destroys Pickup Owned By Jack Wilson

By Mrs. Waldo Smalley

APPLE VALLEY—About noon Friday Jack Wilson had the misfortune of having his pickup truck burn up. He was on the hill at the Apple Valley highway junction to Nyssa when he noticed his feet becoming very warm, and in a few seconds flames shot out around him.

He stopped and jumped from the pickup, grabbing a sweatshirt from back of the seat to beat out the flames. Several other articles came out with the shirt, which were all that were saved from the fire.

Jim Wilson, a son, was following in their other car and he went into Nyssa for help. Nyssa and state police came but the fire department couldn't cross into Idaho. They tried to call Parma from a nearby phone but could not get the call through, so they had to go home and call.

Parma fire department, telephone serviceman, police department and Idaho Power crew came to help but the vehicle was too far gone for them to help much.

The pickup had been used for hunting trips and contained quite a few shells which started exploding, causing more danger and excitement in the crowd which gathered quickly. As soon as the fire was out and wreckage could be moved, it was towed into Parma.
