Gene Lear Named By OSU to Head Extension Work

GENE M. LEAR

Gene M. Lear, a native Oregonian and long-time agricultural leader, will assume official duties July 1 as new associate director of Oregon State university cooperative service.

His appointment was approved by the State Board of Higher Education.

In his new assignment, Lear will work with F. E. Price, dean and director of agriculture for the university, in directing the statewide extension program in agriculture, home economics and 4-H club work.

Lear has been an OSU extension service staff member for 23 years. He was county agricultural agent in Deschutes, Wasco, Union and Umatilla counties and in recent years has been a district extension supervisor in both western and eastern Oregon.

Each Oregon county is served by county agricultural, home economics and 4-H club agents who are off-campus staff members of OSU school of agriculture.

Lear, 46, was born in Condon, graduated from Oregon State in 1938 and received a master's degree in public administration from Harvard university in 1951.

He started as an assistant county agent in eastern Oregon in 1938, served in the navy during World War II and was in charge of extension work in Deschutes county from 1943 to 1956. He was then advanced to the state extension office at Oregon State to become a supervisor for a group of counties.

FALL FROM HORSE INJURES SHERRILL JEAN ROBBINS

Sherrill Jean Robbins, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merilean Robbins, was injured June 17 when she fell from a horse. Her left shoulder was dislocated and the arm broken an inch below the shoulder joint.

She received treatment at St. Luke's hospital in Boise and returned June 20 to her home to convalesce.

Specialist Gives Planning Ideas For Laundry Area

Automatic appliances and new fabrics and finishes make wash-day a breeze provided the lady of the house plans her laundry area to take full advantage of these easy-care clothes.

This is the theme of an article by Bernice Strawn, Oregon State university extension specialist, in the summer-fall issue of New Homes Guide.

Families considering remodeling, or new home planners, should go a step beyond drawing up general laundry arrangements if they went the laundry to function at peak efficiency, Miss Strawn writes.

Here are innovations she suggests:

1) Space to hang easy-care clothes as soon as they come from the dryer. The dryer tosses out wrinkles but if clothes are left in a warm heap or crushed into a basket, they'll require old-fashioned sprinkling and ironing. A ventilated closet near the dryer or extension rods mounted 30 inches above the dryer to accommodate hangers are suggested in the article.

2) A place to hang dripping wet garments. Articles such as pleated skirts and slacks that are hung to drip-dry may be hung over a sink or floor drain.

3) A touchup center for quick pressing of collars, cuffs and other details on easy-care garments. OSU's laundry specialist suggests a steam iron and sleeveboard to be stored ready for use near the dryer.

4) A family will find a sorting center useful in separating clothing according to laundering requirements. New heat-sensitive fabrics should be sorted, she says, according to water temperatures, color and bulk.

Her suggestion is to build bins with drop fronts into wall cabinets 18 inches above the washer and dryer. If the other side of the laundry room wall happens to be a hallway, bathroom or bedroom, so much the better. An opening in the bins from both sides will make it easy for the family to deposit soiled clothes, removable from the laundry side.

5) A spot stain removal center—which may include a small sink—plus storage for dry cleaning fluid, bleaches and other agents is also recommended for the laundry area.

6) Storage for all laundering supplies is sometimes overlooked in planning, says the specialist. Today's laundress uses at least

James H. Jensen, Nationally Known Scientist, Chosen New OSU President

Oregon State university's new president this fall will be Dr. James H. Jensen, 55, vice president of Iowa State university for the past eight years.

Dr. A. L. Strand, who has been president for the past 19 years, is retiring Sept. 1.

An internationally-known botanist and plant pathologist, Dr. Jensen will bring to Oregon State a broad background of experience in university teaching, research and administration, federal government work and foreign assignments.

His appointment as new leader for OSU was announced by William E. Walsh of Coos Bay, president of the State Board of Higher Education. A 15-member faculty committee had screened more than 130 names before making its recommendation to the state board.

Jensen has been on the faculties of three other land grant universities whose organizations and objectives are similar to those of OSU—Nebraska, North Carolina State and Iowa State.

He has worked on the staff of the Atomic Energy commission in Washington, D.C., U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research at Princeton and the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research at Yonkers, N.Y.

Jensen has served also in Cuba, Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic on special governmental assignments.

The new OSU president was born in Nebraska and received his bachelor and master's degrees from University of Nebraska. He attended Columbia university for a year and then completed work for his doctor's degree from University of Wisconsin in 1934.

He was on the University of Nebraska staff from 1937 to 1944, was head of the plant pathology department at North Carolina State for seven years and then went to Iowa State university in 1953 as provost, or executive vice president.

Dr. Jensen is one of the nation's leading authorities in his specialized scientific field and was president of the American Phytopathological society in 1955. He has been a member of the board of directors since 1954 of the Associated Midwest universities and was president of this corporation of 31 mid-western universities in 1959.

five different washing products—water conditioners, fabric softeners, starches, bleaches and detergents. For convenience, they should be stored near the washer.

7) Storage for ironing equipment in the utility area or elsewhere in the house should be sketched into room plan.
