Remember . . . Last Year?

THAT CRAZY EDER BUNCH are shown as they appeared last year on Nyssa's Krazy Saturday, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce. They are (left to right) Ione Storm, Royce Irby, Gene Servoss and Mariah Haney. Who knows, perhaps some crazier dressed merchants will be seen on this year's "Krazy Day" scheduled Saturday, Sept. 23, in Nyssa.

SNAPPED ON CRAZY DAY last year in the Bob Thompson Agency office were (left to right) the big boy himself, decked out in his fanciest night clothes; Lee Hansen, then Nyssa chief of police, and the young Mr. Thompson (Stan) who played Christmas records all day long on that October day and drew all the cartoons for the Crazy issue of the Journal.

Group Meets Friday With Scout Officials To Form Cub Packs

Clarke A. Lethin of Portland, deputy regional executive of the Boy Scouts of America, and Sid Tate of Payette, Ore-Ida council official, met Friday evening with parents and leaders of Nyssa LDS Second ward. According to Mrs. J. Elwood Flinders, purpose of the meeting was to organize Cub Scout packs.

A number of packs are being organized in this area with the LDS stake Primary as sponsoring institution, Mrs. Flinders said. Jim Kern, scout executive from Nampa, helped organize groups in the Nyssa First and Parma wards. He was assisted by Neil Hiatt of Vale. Mrs. Flinders said that about five or six new packs will be organized by the end of the month.

A training course for pack committees and den mothers will be held Sept. 29 and 30. Further information will be announced later, Mrs. Flinders said. One or two packs will be organized Thursday evening in the Ontario wards.

Interesting Books Go Into Circulation Saturday at Malheur County Library

New books going into circulation Saturday, Sept. 16, at Malheur county library include the following popular volumes:

"Inside Europe Today" by John Gunther. Trends, trouble spots and personalities of the contemporary European scene.

"The Savage, My Kinsman" by Elisabeth Elliot. The author, whose missionary husband and four companions were killed by the Auca Indians in 1956, tells of her efforts to communicate with these same Indians as she and her small daughter made their home with them in the Jungles of Ecuador.

"Firsthand Report" by Sherman Adams. President Eisenhower's assistant from 1953 to 1958 discusses at length highlights of the 1952 presidential campaign, the White House staff and cabinet, the crises at Suez and Little Rock, and other domestic and international activities and concerns during that period.

"The Schools" by Martin Mayer. Certain to arouse heated discussion among parents, educators and readers interested in elementary and secondary education, this book, based on field trips, research and a vast amount of reading, is almost encyclopedic in its treatment of today's schools in the U. S., France, England and the Scandinavian nations. The author alternates between unembellished recordings of actual classroom situations, from which the reader is expected to draw his own conclusions, and his own critical opinions on a variety of topics.

"The Last Frontier" by Ben Adams. A short history of Alaska.

"Coil of Life" by Ruth Moore. The author describes in terms the layman can understand the great discoveries of the past 200 years in biology and allied sciences.

"Lanterns and Lances" by James Thurber contains 24 pieces in which the well-known humorist is largely concerned with the survival of our English language, currently being subjected to much erroneous use.

"Complete Book of Rifles and Shotguns" by Jack O'Connor. A comprehensive, fully illustrated guide.

"The Complete Book of Gun Collecting" by Charles Edward Chapel. An authoritative handbook for the expert and beginner on values, acquisition and history of gun development.

"A Journey to Matecumbe" by Robert Lewis Taylor. The story about a boy's funny, often hair-raising flight down the Mississippi to a precarious haven in the Florida Keys just after the Civil War.

"Deep Are the Valleys" by Hannah Close. A sequel to the novel, "High Are the Mountains." Again the story is told from the viewpoint of Wolf of Foix, a disillusioned youth seeking a clear faith and way of life in keeping with his idealistic nature.

"Brotherhood of the Red Poppy" by Henri Troyat. Paris in the days of the Napoleonic wars. The plot is concerned with a high-spirited and politically-minded young Parisian widow tormenting to desperation the young Russian officer who loves her.

"The Intelligent Man's Guide to Science" by Isaac Asimov. A well-proportioned two volume survey, which moves from history to the newest discoveries.

"When F. D. R. Died" by Bernard Asbell. A reconstruction of Franklin D. Roosevelt's death, funeral and burial mirrors the personal shock and grief of numerous persons in the U. S. and throughout the world.

"Dragon in the Kremlin" by Marvin Kalb. An illuminating report on the menacing Russian-Chinese alliance by the Current Moscow correspondent for CBS.

"Thomas Wolfe" by Elizabeth Nowell. A penetrating biography by Wolfe's literary agent.

"Orde Wingate" by Christopher Sykes. The life story of General Wingate, a controversial figure of World War II, an eccentric and a rebel against authority.

"The Mexican War" by Otis A. Singletary. Concise, dramatic account of the war that won the Southwest and California for the United States.

"Nuclear Flight" edited by Lt. Col. Kenneth F. Gantz. This report surveys the work in progress and the future possibilities presently being investigated, particularly by the U. S. Air Force, of the application of nuclear power to air flight.

"Summerhill" by A. S. Neill. The author candidly expresses his unique—and radical—opinions on the important aspects of parent-hood and child rearing.

"Common Sense About the Arab World" by Erskine B. Childers. Emphasis is upon the Middle East in this history of the Arab world from A.D. 600 to the present.

"Mister Moses" by Max Catto. An unusual story about a 40-day trek through the African jungle taken by a native tribe driven from their land by the building of a dam.

"Journey Into the Blue" by Gusztav Rab. This novel describes the fate of the Hungarian upper class under the Communist regime, beginning in 1951 with the deportation of men of former prominence from Budapest to various villages.

"The Winter War" by William W. Haines. The winter campaign of General Miles against the Indians following Custer's defeat at Little Big Horn is the background for this historical novel.

"Complete Handyman" by Charles Hayward. A book for the householder, enabling him to do his own repairs and decorations.

"The Edge of Sadness" by Edwin O'Connor. Events in his parish lead an Irish-American priest to relinquish his world ambitions and rededicate himself to the needs of his flock.

"The Long Haul" by D. A. Rayner. An account of a World War II maritime maneuver in which a torpedoed tanker is towed into port by a destroyer despite stormy seas and the presence of enemy planes and submarines.

"Magic: Its History and Principal Rites" by Maurice Bouissou.

Surveys the forms, history and practices of magic from ancient times to the present-day United States.

"Spy Omnibus" by Kurt Singer. Stories of spy rings, of spies for Hitler, for Russia, for the U. S., spies in the Orient and the story of Francis G. Powers, the U-2 pilot recently sentenced to prison in Russia.

"Tibet Is My Country" by Thubten Jigme Norbu. The autobiography of Thubten Norbu, eldest brother of the Dalai Lama. His quiet record provides an absorbing and authentic picture of Tibetan life and customs.

"Road to Ghana" by Alfred Hutchinson. The long road to Ghana was taken by the native South African author in 1958 when he escaped to South Africa to meet the white Englishwoman he was to marry. His tense yet vivid account of a journey interrupted by a brief imprisonment in Tanganyika offers a telling portrait of contemporary Africa.

"The Tired Spy" by David Stone. A story recounting the adventures and misadventures of Paul Porlock, a middle-aged, undistinguished-looking Englishman who poses as a businessman but is in reality an intelligence agent and would-be artist.
