Elementary Teacher Arithmetic Course Slated in Ontario

A course in foundations of arithmetic for elementary teachers will be presented in Ontario beginning Tuesday, Sept. 26, in room 8, junior high school building. H. L. Maguren will be instructor. The course will carry four semester hours of upper division credit from Washington State university Extension division.

Maguren is one of 12 teachers from five states engaged in this pilot program of in-service instruction in mathematics for teachers. The mathematics staff at Washington State university has prepared the course in answer to a need expressed by National Science Foundation Institute directors.

"Of one million elementary school teachers in the U.S., hundreds of thousands have not studied mathematics beyond ninth or tenth grade," Maguren stated. Summer institutes have helped high school teachers understand their subject better, but it is felt that better understanding behind elementary mathematics teaching is even more important.

This course is designed to enhance understanding of arithmetic as a mathematical system. "It is assumed we know how to compute... let's see how far we can understand why and when," is the instructor's point of view at the beginning of the course, Maguren added.
