OSU Issues Handy Vegetable Bulletin

Have you ever stood in front of the fresh vegetable counter wondering how many servings you could get from a pound of lima beans in their pods?

Have you ever wondered how you'd cook an eggplant or an artichoke if you bought one?

Have you ever wondered how to cook green vegetables so they stay green, white ones so they stay white, and red ones so they stay red?

Have you ever wondered what seasonings or sauces you might use with certain vegetables so they'll appeal to finicky eaters in your family?

Answers to these and many more questions about fresh, frozen and canned vegetables can be found in a new, free bulletin. Oregon residents may get copies of "Choosing and Using Western Vegetables" from local county extension offices or from the bulletin clerk at Oregon State university.
