Why
Fertilize
Early?

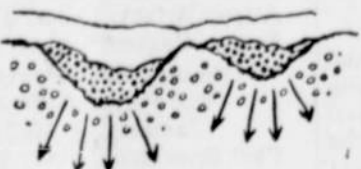

Pasture and row crops require adequate nitrogen at the start of the season for strong early growth and development. It is during this period when extensive feeder roots and top growth are developed. Whenever possible, apply the full nitrogen treatment early in the growing season.

BROADCAST AND PLOW DOWN YOUR fertilizer whenever possible. Many researchers report that plowing fertilizer down for potatoes, beets, corn and other row crops is an excellent method of application.

PLOW-DOWN OF FERTILIZER brings fertilizer and crop residues in to close contact and facilitates more rapid breakdown of carbonaceous material. Extra nutrients are released for the new crop. Extra bushels or tons at harvest time is the pay off.

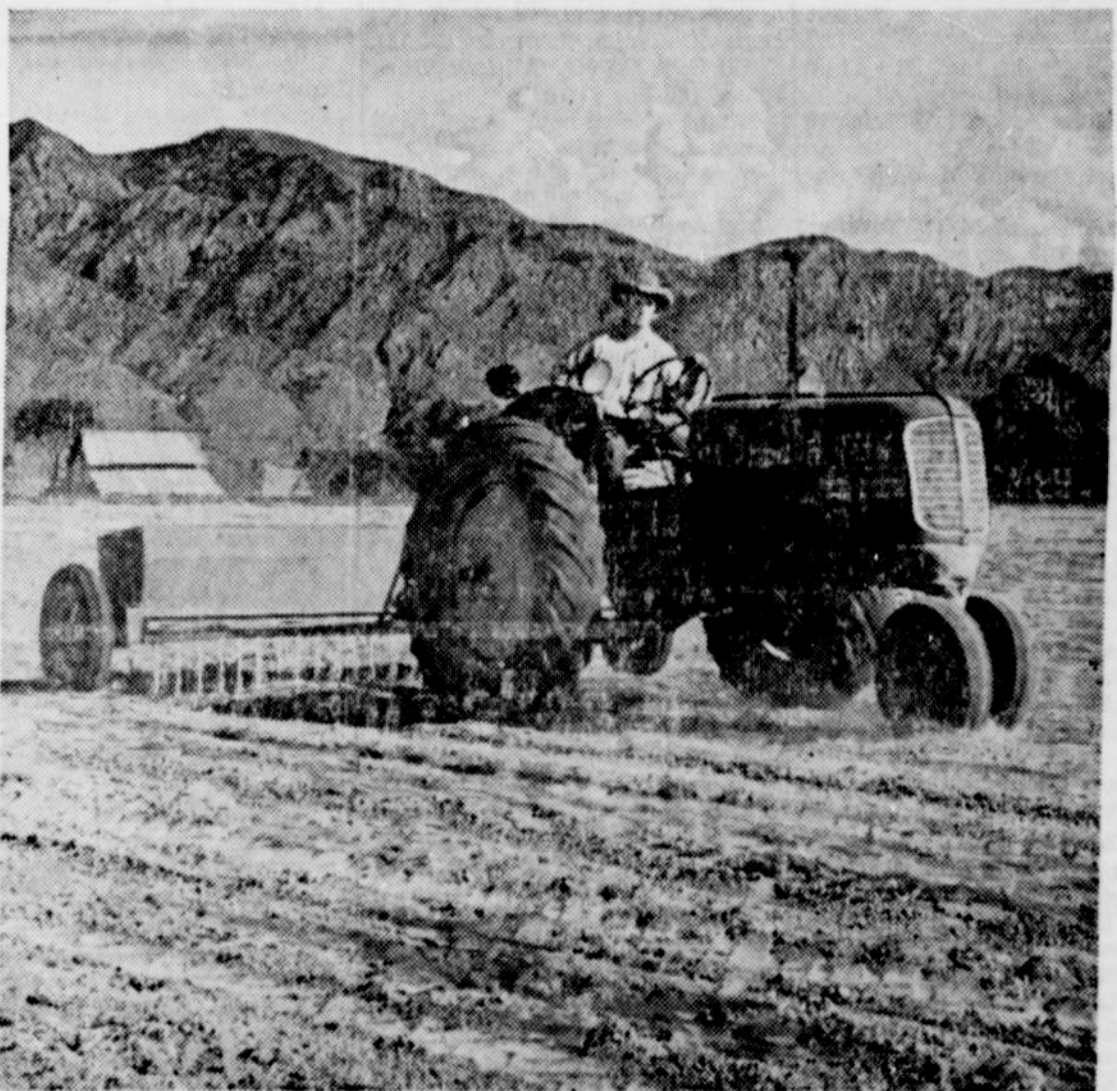

PLOWING PLACES FERTILIZER both deep and shallow — shallow enough to be available to new seedlings in early season and deep enough to be in moisture and available to deeper roots during the hot summer growing season.

EARLY FERTILIZATION gets the job done ahead of planting and assures maximum efficiency from fertilizer.

HARVEST MORE DOLLARS! Use enough fertilizer! Farmers who don't use enough fertilizer get lower yields and lower profits.

FERTILIZE EARLY and use USS Nitrogen Fertilizer for results that count at the bank.

Fertilize EARLY For Profits

The farmer who fertilizes early in the season not only gets a vital job completed before the rush but he also gets maximum benefits from his fertilizer. Many county agents, researchers and sugar company fieldmen stress the importance of early application.

Don't delay, order today. And for pre-plant fertilization, insist on USS Nitrogen Fertilizer, made by United States Steel. Available in bag, bulk or tank, USS Nitrogen Fertilizers are top-quality, profit-producing fertilizers. Know enough to use enough — and make sure you get USS Nitrogen Fertilizers.
