Pets Need Clearance For Washington Entry

Oregon residents who expect to visit Century 21 in Seattle should make arrangements to comply with animal health requirements if they plan to take pets.

All animals require an official health certificate from a deputy state veterinarian before going into Washington. In addition, all dogs over three months old Washington-bound should be vaccinated against rabies at least 14 days before entry. Cats will not need to be inoculated for rabies.

Oregonians should be prepared to "park" their animals away from the Century 21 grounds, the Oregon Department of Agriculture has been advised by Washington livestock officials.
