Rob Peter to Pay Paul?

Until recent years, ever since the post office was founded, its basic services-carrying of mails and publications-have been regarded as an essential contribution to public education, enlightenment and entertainment.

The cost of operations was looked upon as a legitimate expenditure that should not pay its way entirely (any more than the Department of Agriculture). But with the coming of TV as a better medium of showing the dentifrice smile of politicians the newspapers and magazines may not be essential any more.

Anyway, a bill has passed the House asking for a rate increase on all types of mail. Included is a raise on the mailing of newspapers. This in spite of the cost going up 87 percent in the past three years would add another 145 percent on top of present costs (on our paper) if the House bill should be enacted into law. A raise is probably in order but provisions of the bill would make the cost of our mailing the Journal to a subscriber across the river in the Apple Valley community as great as sending a large New York paper from the east coast to Nyssa.

And one of the worst conditions is the President's plan to base pay raises for postal employees on passage of the bill. His idea is for the raise in rates to be used for their additional pay and not to wipe out the deficit. But there are 585,000 postal employees, well organized, who possibly control three times that many votes. And this being an election year for all representatives and one-third the senators we can hardly expect them to favor the newspapers with considerate legislation.

The postmaster general says the answer is for publications to increase prices of advertising and subscriptions. He may be right but while there is no end to increases that can be voted for mailing costs, there is an end to what customers are willing and able to pay.

What a wonderful country this could be

- if every politician voted for the security and future of his country, instead of for his own next election.

- if every "liberal" worked for the financial soundness of his country instead of for the socialist idea of dragging everyone down to the same drab low level.

- if every business manager said and did what he knew was right, rather than what he thinks the union or his stockholders or the U.S. Department of Justice or whatever would like him to do or say.

- if every workman did his best day's work because he knows that is the only honest way to earn his wages, and the way to rebuild his country's strength. - if every voter voted for America, not for "who will give me the most."
