Knife and Fork Club Members to Hear Of Africa at Meeting Planned Tonight

William "Brick" Neighbors, a native Virginian and now a Californian after spending eight years with "British cousins" in portions of "darkest Africa" and as an observer who sees that continent as potentially the greatest ever, will be guest of honor when members of the Knife and Fork club sit down to dinner at 8 o'clock this evening at East Side cafe in Ontario.

Neighbors has just returned from a repeat visit to Africa that took most of the summer.

After graduating from the University of Richmond, Neighbors went to England and enrolled in the University of Manchester. After being graduated from its school of economics he became a vice consul assigned to Manchester. Later he transferred to the American embassy in London.

In 1951, Neighbors accepted an assignment from the British to become their economic officer in British East Africa, an empire in the east central part of the African continent and a particularly important part of that vast continent. His headquarters were in Nairobi and his job took him to many sections of the British holdings as well as to other territories. He became familiar with the economic status and potentials of this large territory.

"Watch Africa" is Neighbors' admonition to fellow Americans. "The continent has terrific potentials," he says. "Once developed it can be an important part of the world economy, could possibly be the dominating force a hundred years from now."

A feature of the Neighbors' address is the explanation of the Congo situation and of the "Mau Mau" warfare in Kenya. Neighbors lived within 10 miles of these territories in Kenya. Designed to drive the white man out of Kenya, Neighbors will tell the impact of this savage organization, the cause for its existence and the reason for its activities.

the versatile fuel

Natural gas is the finest, most versatile source of energy known to mankind. A majority of the great industries of this area now depend on natural gas for a wide variety of uses.

Factories, bakeries, dairies, greenhouses, newspapers, restaurants, laundries, food packers, hotels, motels, foundries, paper mills, plywood plants—all use natural gas.

156 schools throughout Cascade's service area are now using this fine fuel. And 90% of the new homes built along routes of natural gas mains are gas-equipped.

From manufacturing glass and airplanes to heating swimming pools and baby's bottles, natural gas is the preferred fuel. Because it is clean, safe, fast, efficient—and economical.
