

Youthful Adventurer to Give Program At Wednesday Knife and Fork Dinner

Africa, hottest of the world's continents, both temperature-wise and news-wise, will be included among a lot of other strange places and stories when the Knife and Fork club meets at dinner Wednesday evening, Jan. 16, at East Side cafe in Ontario.

Speaking on the subject of "Odd Experiences, Customs and Places" will be youthful Robert Christopher, a calm, sedate, pleasant fellow to whom adventuring is like breathing. Already, the genial, likeable Christopher has been hailed as this generation's Richard Haliburton.

Although only just past 30, the Chicagoan has been to more hard-to-get-to places than veteran adventurers spending a lifetime at it.

It was a recent "safari" to Africa and the Sahara that stirs the usually calm demeanor of Christopher into blazing action. "It's by all odds the greatest journey I have ever taken," he exults.

This statement coming from the fellow who started an adventuring career when he hitchhiked from Chicago to the New York World's Fair and who went around the world on $80 that Colliers magazine grub-staked him to, must mean something.

"People always ask me how hot does it get in the Sahara," explains Christopher, "when really the astounding thing about the Sahara is how cold it gets." "And how cold does it get?" he was asked. "So cold that unsuspecting and poorly equipped persons have frozen to death. Our own gerba water bags froze into ice." Christopher's trip across the Sahara followed the ancient camel routes of the Crusaders and it is the exciting episodes occurring during this trip that he will recount for club members.
