FOOT in the Door

An edict from Washington D.C. — by the Secretary of Interior—has made southern Idaho a part of the "marketing area" of the Bonneville Power Administration, the federal power sales agency operating in Oregon, Washington, northern Idaho and western Montana.

The edict came without Congressional consideration. It was based upon a feasibility study which was not made public.

The effect of the edict is to transfer responsibility from the Bureau of Reclamation to Bonneville for power sales management of Bureau hydroelectric plants and power lines. Power customers of the Bureau of Reclamation in southern Idaho now become customers of the Bonneville Power Administration. This is the only immediate change.

Fortunately for southern Idaho, Congress will later decide after full hearings whether some $100 million of tax money will be appropriated for unnecessary and wasteful transmission facilities to carry Bonneville system power across southern Idaho for the benefit of a few "preference customers."

The edict is the "foot in the door" leading toward federal bureaucratic domination of water resources, of irrigation, of agriculture, of the southern Idaho economy and the erosion of its tax base. As Lenin said: "socialism is government electricity plus bookkeeping."
