Crystal ball gazing is a pretty risky way to find values, old timer. They aren't much good in helping you discover where to buy groceries, or what to get for Aunt Hazel's birthday, or even what car to buy. But you know something? ... advertising sure helps! Advertising brings the world to your doorstep. It tells you what is for sale and where you can get it. It gives you descriptions, and prices, and ideas. It allows you to compare and get the most value for your money. It saves you time, and shoe leather, and worry. Advertising does more, too. It promotes competition and mass selling which results in the constant development of better products for less ... and saving money is important to all of us. Sure, crystal balls might be good for some things —but for day to day value it pays to be advertised at.
