Fresh Produce Grade Revision Slated July 25

Oregon will not have standard containers for fresh produce after July 25.

Those container standards that still remained in effect in Oregon are repealed by an order issued this week by the Oregon Department of Agriculture.

However, this does not mean that the department will not continue its check for deceptive weights and measures. Also, all labeling statutes still apply. Gordon Schwalen, hearings officer for the hearing held June 24 at Salem to consider the proposals for repealing container standards and revision of grade standards for 35 fresh produce commodities, said the standards were repealed because they had become obsolete and were no longer applicable to present packaging and merchandising of fresh commodities.

All of the grade standards for changes proposed in grade standards for 35 fresh produce commodities also have been adopted in orders issued by the department. They become effective on July 25.

In most instances the changes were made to bring Oregon grade standards in line with the present U. S. Department of Agriculture grade standards.

Affected by the revisions in grades or container standards are apples, apricots, asparagus, snap beans, beets, brussel sprouts, cabbage, cantaloupes, bunched carrots, cauliflower, celery, sweet cherries, green corn, dewberries and blackberries, filbert kernels.

American eastern-type bunch grapes, European-type bunch grapes, lettuce, loganberries, onions, onion sets, parsnips, peaches, pears (summer, fall and winter), fresh peas, fresh plums and prunes, raspberries.

Spinach plants, squash (fall and winter), strawberries, fresh tomatoes, walnuts (in shell and shelled) and watermelons.

In the case of filbert kernels, there are no U. S. grade standards. The changes here are for a clarification on whole and broken meats and the definition of foreign materials.
