AFTER THE LAST NAIL IS DRIVEN...

After months of planning and waiting, your new home is finished. The contractor has rolled up his blueprints, the carpenter has packed up his tools. Together with the plumber, electrician and bricklayer they are now loading their trucks and soon will be on their way to new jobs. It is a proud moment for you and a great climax to the time, planning and saving that have gone into this, your great adventure in home ownership. But without attempting to disturb the illusion, may we add a note of caution:

You are now on your own. The folks who constructed your home have turned over the keys. You are the new manager. The responsibility of maintenance, the problems of protection and conservation of this major property investment are now up to you. The decisions you make can determine whether your home will be a source of continuous worry or a sound, long term investment in better living and a wise financial program.

There is a good likelihood that we at Bestway Building Center are already acquainted with your new home. Among the thousands of homes constructed annually in this area, a great portion of them are built with materials from Bestway. At one time your home may have been on our drafting boards, or perhaps your contractor used our interim financing service to complete the structure. But whether your home is still new enough to smell of fresh paint or approaching a ripe, old age . . . and whether the materials were supplied by us or not . . . we do have a specialized interest in maintaining its soundness, beauty and intrinsic value.

As a property owner, we naturally feel that your property problems can best be solved by a firm that specializes only in building and construction materials and their uses. And as a "full-time, full-time" building materials dealer we believe that Bestway is uniquely qualified to bring you the best-rounded and most experienced property conservation service available anywhere. More than a half-century's intensive experience in the shelter field have given us the know-how to evaluate and solve even the most complex building problem. Additionally, the 100 Bestway stores serving cities and towns of every size and economic status in seven Western states give us a day-by-day insight into the changing scene of modern construction.

Couple this with Bestway's nation-wide buying contacts and area-wide distribution facilities and you have the assurance of traditionally high quality and low, every-day prices. We are in the market place continuously to assure you of the finest products of America's forests and factories and can provide, through Bestway Budget Plan, a sensible way for any home owner to meet, out of income, any modernization or repair that may be needed or desired.

After the last nail is driven is the logical time for you to look around for a partner in maintaining your property. We would welcome the responsibility and challenge of helping you maintain maximum livability and value in your home for a lifetime and longer.
