Work Smarter . . . Not Harder

By BERNICE STRAWN, Extension Home Management Specialist

FLAMEPROOFING . . . is possible the do-it-yourself way.

In children's rooms or a recreation area, it's a good idea to flame-proof draperies, bedspreads and other fabrics as a safety precaution. This works well on cotton, linen or rayon. Don't use it on resin-treated fabrics, acetate, nylon or other synthetics. Here's how to do it.

Make a paste from 1/4 cup of powdered boric acid (3 oz.) and a little water. Then add 2 quarts of hot water. Next stir in a scant cup of borax (7 ounces) until it dissolves.

The fabric should be dry when you put it into this solution. Soak until thoroughly wet. For large draperies you will need to double or triple this recipe. Some fabrics don't soak up liquid quickly. For these, add a teaspoon of liquid detergent to each gallon. Spin or wring out excess water. Dry and press with a warm iron. This protective finish washes out and will need to be repeated the next time the fabric is washed.

MANY WOMEN WORK TOO HARD

. . . with their vacuums. If you have a canister cleaner, don't push down on the nozzle. This just makes it work harder and is rougher on you.

It's the suction that does the cleaning, not the push down in the carpet. Bearing down on the wand, tips up the front of nozzle, breaks the vacuum seal. Then dirt can't be pulled out.

Watch it next time and see if pushing down doesn't make the front end come up. Just guide the cleaner along, keep the nozzle flat and you'll pick up more dirt.

YOUNGSTERS ARE LIKE POPCORN

. . . when they get to a campground, says Jessaloe Mallalieu, OSU extension recreation specialist. They pop all over the place and often get lost.

Each child should have a whistle on a string around his neck. Tiny tots need a bell attached to their clothing.

CHEMICAL OVEN CLEANERS . . . do a wonderful job if used correctly.

We'd like to caution you against putting the cleaner on the thermostat bulb. This is the small tube you'll find usually near the top and at one side of the oven. The cleaner may cause corrosion of this metal and interfere with temperature control. The oven lining, however, is not hurt by the chemical.

How good a juggler are you? That's what management really is — juggling what you have to make time and money for the things you enjoy most. In other words . . . smart thinking.

PLASTICS ARE EVERYWHERE . . . in kitchen, dining room — all through the house. But there are lots of different kinds, which gets confusing sometimes. Some of them soften with heat, others don't, so be careful what you put in the dishwasher. The melamine type can stand hot water.

If you don't know just what kinds of plastics you are dealing with, play safe and avoid scouring powders, high heat, bleach, cleaning fluids and alcohol.

Our extension bulletin, "Care of Metals and Kitchenware," tells more about cleaning plastics, as well as pewter, brass and other metals. Drop us a card for your free copy.
