Wolves and Big Spenders

The Eskimos have a very effective way of dealing with wolf packs. They embed razor-sharp knives clasp down in the ice and rub the blades with a little seal blood. The wolves attracted by the blood, lick the knives cutting their tongues. They are greedily delighted by the seemingly inexhaustible supply of nourishing blood they can lick off the knives. They stand there licking until they drop in their tracks from the loss of their own blood, and freeze to death in the snow.

In a less grisly way, big and unprincipled federal spenders are forcing American taxpayers into monied-bloodletting traps.

A harsh indictment? Not at all when you look into the facts. The only money the national government has is what it takes from the people in taxes. Therefore, no matter how enticing the bureaucrat-disbursers make their programs look by smearing them with "something-for-nothing" bait, every nickel of the expenditures must be extracted from the taxpayers.

Unless there is prompt action to put a check rein on the wild spenders, taxpayers are in danger of being drained of every drop of their fiscal blood.

Double Jeopardy Law Provisions Discussed

Most likely you can't picture yourself being brought into court on anything worse than a speeding violation. Nearly everyone feels that way. Even so, it is good to know that in this country you can't be made to stand trial twice for the same offense.

We have a provision in the Oregon Constitution against "double jeopardy." That's one of the important safeguards in our system of law which makes it certain that once a court has reached a verdict of "innocent," the acquitted person may not be put on trial again for the same offense.

This right holds good, however, only if a full trial is held and a verdict is reached. It is possible to face another trial on the same charge if the first trial ends with a "hung jury" or a "mistrial," or if a new trial is requested or if the judgment of acquittal is reversed by the State Supreme Court on appeal by the state.

A classic example comes from the "Wild West" in the late 1880's. A man named Ball was charged with murder, along with two others. Ball was acquitted but the others were found guilty. The guilty pair appealed to a higher court and their original indictment was found to be faulty.

Once again the government accused all three men. Ball claimed his right against double jeopardy had been invaded and the U. S. Supreme Court agreed. He didn't have to stand trial again. The other two did and paid the penalty for their guilt.

The reason for the "double jeopardy" provision is to protect the individual from being hounded all his life. In old England, where the fear of tyranny first prompted safeguards for personal freedom, one court said:

"Were it not for this rule, any one obnoxious to the government might be run down by repeated

RETURN FROM VACATION

From This Corner...

By T. M. B.

About a year ago a doctor told me to get away from the print shop as often as I could and do what would enable me to forget the business.

My wife thinks I hired him to tell me that—but I did take his advice and hit for the hills and small streams of Idaho this past weekend. Didn't catch any elbow-benders for size but saw some real magnificent country on the back roads from McCall to the Salmon river and on to Riggins.

The roads are narrow and quite steep in places but one can get over it in any passenger car and I would recommend it to anyone who likes beautiful mountain scenery.

Returned a little earlier than usual and found two of my old hometown buddies, Tom Morris and John Holman, at my house. They had been to Canada and Washington deep sea fishing and were on the way home to Berryville, Ark. We did get to show them quite a little of our country and they were very impressed with the fertility of the farming section and surprised at the climate.

They were here during the electrical storm and rain Sunday night—and we, along with Foy Brown, had told them we didn't have that kind of weather here in the summertime. Anyway hope they enjoyed their stay as much as we did.

Missed the dedication of the Bully Creek dam but from all reports it was well attended by dignitaries and politicians and quite a number of ordinary voters. This project should be a boon to Vale and the farmers in that vicinity. It is also one project that will eventually pay for itself.

Speaking of farmers... We hear that there is objection to the city spraying program carried on in daytime. They say it should be done at night when it will not kill the valuable alkali and leaf-cutter bees. Seems to me they could easily arrange for the city to do this OK then by taking it up with City Manager Art Colby.

The last time the city sprayed, Colby asked that we inform the people in town that it would be well not to water for a few days so the spray would have full effect. The following morning all the south park sprinklers were going full-blast. So even in a small town the left hand sometimes doesn't know what the right is doing!

What has happened to our weed eradication project? I still see city streets and alleys, as well as vacant lots that are still loaded with weeds well over a month from the time of warning.

DID YOU KNOW?

The American Medical association now claims there is no physical value in sun tanning, and that over-exposure is damaging to the skin. "Sunlight speeds wrinkles and aging and excessive exposure over a period of time can cause serious skin conditions." If you do sunburn, treat it as any other burn.

NEED A PLUMBER?

Wyatt Smith is having his house remodeled and during the process used his do-it-yourself kit to do the plumbing in the new location for his washing machine. When he got all through and turped the water on it came out onto the roof through the vent pipe. If you need any unusual plumbing jobs done, Wyatt's number is listed in the Nyssa phone directory.

IN APPRECIATION

We take this opportunity to publicly thank the Nyssa doctors, nurses and other members of the staff at Malheur Memorial hospital for their many kindnesses extended to our son and brother, Louis Holman, during his stay in the hospital. We also want to thank ladies of the Christian church for food and all our other friends for their many expressions of sympathy.

Your deeds will never be forgotten.

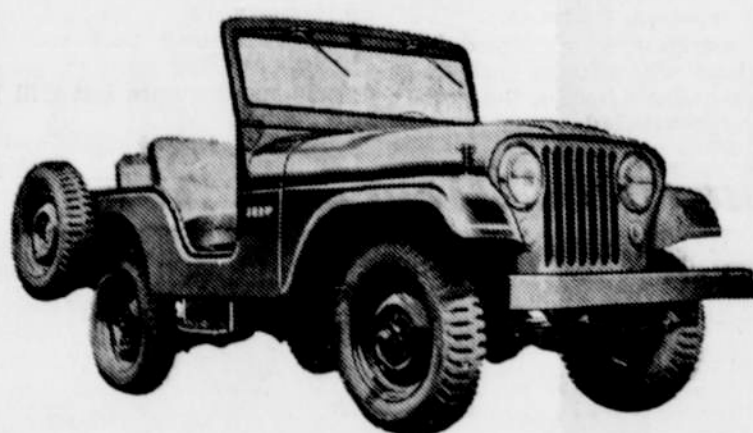

—Mrs. Harriet Pennie and Family.
