seeking new gas reserves for your future comfort

These geologists at left, examining terrain near Shiprock in northern New Mexico, are part of a team of modern explorers searching for new gas reserves. They travel by jeep, helicopter and afoot in this continuing program to seek out new supplies for your future comfort. Natural gas, formed millions of years ago, is a resource which will serve the West far into the future. Each year new reserves are found, keeping well ahead of the growing demand for America's most modern fuel. Heating, cooking, water heating—and scores of payroll-building commercial and industrial uses—are among the benefits brought to the West today by natural gas. If you're now enjoying the benefits of natural gas it's partly because of the team of highly trained people who bring it to you. If you're not a user of natural gas, it is easy to become one.*
