Refinery Workers Complete Safety Course

THIS IS THE SECOND of two photos of supervisors, fieldmen and members of the safety committee of the Nyssa factory of Amalgamated Sugar company. These men, in addition to those pictured in last week's issue of the Journal, recently completed a six-hour basic safety training course. Instructor was Stanley Day, special service representative of the Oregon Industrial Accident commission, assisted by Linn DeWald, safety director for Amalgamated. The men in this photo are (front row, left to right) Johnnie Richard, DeWald, Joe Bellon, Waynard Talbot, Maurice Glover, Ardh Huffaker and Solon Lewis. Second row, Preston Tilley, Leland Ricks, Frank Russell, E. L. McCrady, Jerome Linder, Cecil Pearson. Top row, Leonard McCosh, Desmond Jones, John S. Newman, Eales Sumpter, Instructor Day and Eldon Jensen. The course consisted of flip charts bearing statistical information and sound slide pictures emphasizing the part a supervisor plays and his responsibility in making safety a part of each employee's job. The State Accident commission will present individual certificates to all who completed the course.

Nobel Prize Winner Linus C. Pauling Sets High Record as Student at OSU

Dr. Linus C. Pauling, who has just been named winner of a second Nobel prize, is a native Oregonian whose brilliance in science began to show while he was a student at Oregon State university.

In 1954, Pauling received the Nobel prize in chemistry for his research into forces that hold molecules together.

This week, he was named winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts to halt nuclear tests. He will receive the $49,465 prize Dec. 10.

Only one other person, Marie Curie of radium fame, has ever won more than one Nobel prize. The awards are given in physics, chemistry, medicine and physiology, literature and peace from a fund established by Alfred B. Nobel, Swedish engineer and inventor.

Graduated From OSU in 1922

Pauling, America's only double winner, was born in Portland and was graduated with honors in chemical engineering from Oregon State in 1922. As a junior, he was employed on a part-time basis as an assistant instructor in chemistry, it was noted by university officials.

He was president of the chemistry honor society and his academic record shows a sprinkling of A-plus grades, mostly in chemistry. The A-plus grades have

Nyssa Students Cited For Activities at OSU

Dan R. Wilson is president of the pharmacy honor society, Kappa Psi, at Oregon State university, according to a university release.

To qualify for the honorary, students must demonstrate high scholarship abilities and promise of future achievements.

Wilson is a senior this year in the school of pharmacy. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Wilson of 910 King avenue, Nyssa.

Sandra J. Lewis is one of the major staff members this year for the Beaver, OSU yearbook.

The Beaver has won the highest possible rating each of the past four years in national yearbook judging competition.

A graduate of Nyssa high, Miss Lewis is a junior this year at OSU in the school of science. Her parents are former Nyssans, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Lewis of Caldwell.

If we could see ourselves as others see us, we'd probably deny it.
