IT'S YOUR LAW

By Oregon State Bar

Difference Discussed Between Copyright, Patent Law Coverage

Alert observers frequently notice that some articles are patented, while other seemingly similar items are copyrighted. The question accordingly arises as to what constitutes the difference between a patent and a copyright.

Patents are granted to inventors on new and useful articles of manufacture, compositions of matter, methods and processes, ornamental designs of articles of manufacture and certain types of plants.

Copyrights are granted to authors, composers or artists on works such as books (which include not only bound volumes, but also pamphlets, leaflets and even single sheets), periodicals, speeches, plays, musical compositions, phonograph records, works of art, maps, photographs and motion pictures.

Some articles are difficult for an untrained observer to classify. Printed forms are an example of such articles.

If the form is a card or sheet having a peculiar shape or a physical structure (such as perforations or notches in certain positions) that adapts the card or sheet for a particular use, so that it amounts to a new article of manufacture, the card or the sheet would constitute a subject for coverage by patent rather than by copyright.

If the same or another card or sheet bears graphic matter such as a written text, a compilation of figures or of other data, a chart or a diagram, the graphic matter (distinguished from the card or sheet itself) would be subjected to coverage by copyright rather than by patent.

From This Corner...

By T. M. B.

It's good to see the rain let up and the beet trucks heavy again on Main street. The farmers are understandably justified in being concerned about the weather. Normally we don't have to worry about not being able to harvest all the beets—but it has happened, I'm told.

One of the main topics of conversation we find among the merchants is the rise in local taxes. (We, too, noticed it rather sharply!) But having read about our school district going from a "poor" to a "rich" district and being aware that we had voted for a higher school budget, we were prepared for it.

Stories reaching us have been that the increases have ranged from a few dollars to $7000 increase over last year. It's not surprising that the voters rejected the increase in income taxes imposed by the last legislature.

The called session of the legislature is in Salem and Governor Hatfield wants permission to cut basic school aid—saying the people are opposed to additional taxes. We believe he is right and all taxing authorities will do well to keep this in mind.

(All except federal... We still vote for candidates who offer to get more for us at the expense of other taxpayers than we would vote to pay for ourselves!)

We failed to comment on the good behavior of our Nyssa kids at Halloween time... It has become customary for little damage to be done here and we probably wouldn't have thought of it had not our exchange weeklies made mention of it.

Local hunters report pheasants are still plentiful but getting wild and not holding good for the dogs. The only thing I've found wild around them is my shooting. My dog still gets disgusted with me and catches one quite frequently.

His trouble is he will jump on a female as quick as the other sex.

Just a year ago, in this column, I told about a local businessman and his son shooting at some rooster decoys planted near the road. I didn't name them nor will I name those guilty of the same trick this year.

One of the latter is named Ted... and he wants to know if the Kurtz family has been planting these for several years.

Art Taylor of Parma who works at the Olympic heard peculiar noises in his motor while coming to work Tuesday. After driving all the way to Nyssa and checking after he'd cut the motor, discovered an alley cat on top of his motor. Guess you might say his motor was purring like a kitten!

ON THE NATIONAL SCENE Tax cut bill bogged down with hearings. It seems Senator Byrd of Virginia is wanting to know if the president plans to increase spending while asking for a tax decrease. The delay will probably hold over until the new budget is published.

Civil rights not apt to get action until next year. It seems Bobbie got more in the bill than congress will support and the Clan is now asking for a lesser bill in the hopes of clearing both houses.

Two past presidents of the American Bar association are agreed that the proposed law is 10% CIVIL RIGHTS AND 90% EXTENSION OF FEDERAL POWER. One said, "It contains a greater extension of federal power than all the acts of congress and all supreme court decisions from 1787 to date."

Foreign aid has come in for extreme criticism and appears apt to take quite a cut. Such Kennedy stalwarts as our Senator Morse has dared oppose the amount sought by the administration. (He's aware of the feeling of Oregon voters on high taxes and has interpreted them as well as Daniel did the monarch's dream in Biblical times.)

About the time we find something kind to say about Mr. Morse he sends us something that dismays us. The last such was an announcement concerning the Pacific Power and Light company signing a "wheeling" contract to deliver Bonneville power to a co-op serving Lake county, Ore., and Modoc county, Calif.

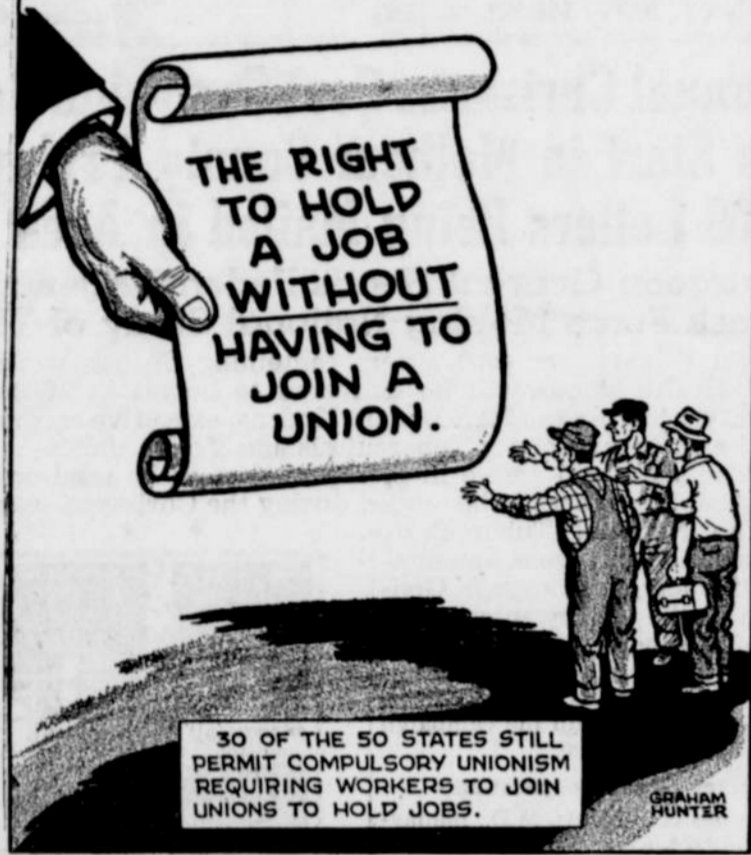

He commended the private power company and said, "I hope the Idaho Power company will show the same sort of cooperation with BPA to bring federal power to PREFERENCE (our capitalization) customers in Southern Idaho." And who shall pay for their being PREFERENCE customers other than us ORDINARY taxpayers?

DID YOU KNOW? Over 98 percent of the nation's farms now have electricity, yet the Rural Electrification administration continues to expand its activities?

The AFL-CIO committee on political education favors Goldwater as the Republican nominee? And nearly every major union is rooting for him? And nearly every major union is rooting for him? The other front runners considered for the position are too near in the same bracket to get support worked up for Kennedy should they be the nominee. They feel they can get more voters out on a hate campaign.

Thirteen states and the District of Columbia are using reflective material on rear license plates that can be seen for 1500 feet at night with the car parked or disabled? Cost—25 cents.

SPEAKING OF RIGHTS, WHAT ABOUT THIS ONE?

Nyssa Makes Songfest a Success

(From the Nyssa High Bulldog)

Successfulness of school events, such as the recent Hootenanny, is largely dependent upon the students themselves.

We are certainly justified in being proud of our Hootenanny, and judging from the comments of out-of-towners, they seem to share in some of our exuberance. Perhaps NHS has started something which will lead to better relations between valley schools—at least we've started it; now it will be up to another town to continue the idea.

Few of us realize the amount of time and work that went into the songfest, but those who donated it certainly do!

One interesting point was the number of adults in attendance. Whether they were prompted by mere curiosity or a genuine love of folk songs is debatable, but some are still relating their favorable comments, showing this was not exclusive to the teenager.

Events like this show the older generation we aren't a bunch of hoodlums or juvenile delinquents, and on occasion, we really can be human, which may come as something of a shock to some of them.

Let's show them more of the same!

Recreational Facilities Praised

(From the Nyssa High Bulldog)

Have you bothered to look around at our parks lately? Nyssa is certainly fortunate, for a town of its size, to have three parks with recreational facilities.

At the new park by the river at the entrance from Idaho, there are camping facilities for travelers, and already there have been tents and trailers seen taking advantage of the new accommodations.

There was a lot of work done at the north park this summer. Baseball diamonds were set up for the summer baseball program. Swings and other recreational equipment are put to full use by the youngsters and now they don't have to cross Main Street to play in a park.

Of course the old south city park still gets put to use. Many improvements are shown here, too.

City Manager Art Colby and other city employees are to be commended on the fine job they have done for Nyssa by improving our recreational facilities to such a fine standard.
