

OSU Extension Specialist Gives Tips On Purchasing New Washing Machine

One out of 10 Oregon families purchased washers last year and spent a total of $15 million on laundry equipment. About 70 percent of this amount was for replacement of appliances. Bernice Strawn, Oregon State university specialist, says that many families who purchased washers in the early 1950's will be replacing them either in the remaining months of 1963 or in 1964. According to U.S. Department of Agriculture research, a washer can be expected to last about nine years.

What's in store for equipment shoppers? Miss Strawn says the big news in 1964 laundry equipment (now in stores) is fully automatic washers to fit almost every budget from the 6 to 14-pound "extra large" washer.

Bulk Should Be Considered

Shoppers should first consider types of clothes they have to launder. A large capacity machine may be able to wash 12 pounds of heavy work clothes, but not 12 pounds of such things as nylon curtains and lingerie. It's the bulk and density of the clothes that counts, says Miss Strawn.

In order to get clothes clean, there must be enough space to permit free movement of wash and rinse water. A standard-size washer may take care of some families' needs better than a larger washer.

Market surveys indicate that many washer users do not sort clothes as carefully as they should and are disappointed when whites look dingy or wash and wear are wrinkled.

Accessory Basket Provided

What happens is that well-sorted loads tend to be small, and all clothes are dumped together into the machine, says the specialist. Many washers now have a flexible multi-water level control which makes it possible to wash loads from 2 to 14 pounds without waste of water or detergent. One 12-pound washer has an accessory miniature basket designed to take care of items usually washed by hand.

Other features found on new washers include automatic dispensers of detergent, bleach and fabric softeners, cold and warm soak cycles and sudsavers as optional or standard features. Improvements are also noted in rinsing, lint disposal and special pre-rubbing cycles for heavily soiled fabrics.

Should Ask Other Questions

Some of the less obvious questions shoppers should seek answers to include how much water does the washer use, what kind of fill-time or meter, how many and what type of rinses, and what provisions are made for lint removal.

Will new dryers keep up with larger washers? Large capacity and speedier drying are their new features.
