Vale invaded the Nyssa court Friday evening and took both ends of a double header against the Bulldogs. The junior varsity lost by a score of 46-34, while the varsity went down on a 66-35 onslaught.

Saturday night the Bulldogs repeated the process, falling to the Emmett Huskies on the Idaho court by a 69-38 score.

and this was undoubtedly one of the most spectacular experiences on our trip.

At 7 p.m. the park was cleared in preparation for a big New Year's eve celebration, so we all hustled back to our buses. Two of our boys were on the Monorail when the park closed and were left off at the Disneyland Hotel. They had quite a time before they got back inside the gates.

Finally a policeman brought one of the boys back, after finding him running around in circles on the parking lot, and shortly thereafter caught the other trying to climb the fence after looking for an opening for half an hour. Needless to say, this added some humor to the occasion and the boys took a ribbing, even though they were victims of circumstance.

Souvenirs Appear on Scene

We had supper at the Knott's Berry Farm famous Chicken Dinner restaurant and then spent an hour snooping around. Fortunately the place closed at 10 p.m. because by that time our gang had a good start toward buying out the curio shop. And now hats and souvenirs of all descriptions appeared on the scene.

The driver of the leading bus asked Frank Turner to ride with him on our return to UCLA to show him the way. After about an hour and a half we in the back buses began to speculate on what it was Turner was trying to show us as we drove the freeways and the hills of the area.

When we finally returned to the campus 15 minutes before the New Year, it turned out that our band director had fallen asleep and the driver just kept going, waiting for orders.

Welcome in New Year

We stayed downstairs in the lounge long enough to usher in 1964 and sing "Auld Lang Syne," and then to bed.

Wednesday the phones started ringing at 4 a.m. and it was quite a task getting everyone on his feet, packed and ready to go. We had a 5 o'clock breakfast, and the buses were loaded. We were on our way by 6 a.m.

Three of the boys and a like number of girls either missed being called or went back to sleep, so missed out on breakfast. Most of the crew, however, was in pretty good shape and ready for the long march.

Organization Commended

Here was where the terrific organization of the Tournament of Roses committee became evident. The bus drivers had printed orders and maps of the route to the parade-forming area, and stickers on the bus windshields.

At almost every intersection was a committeeman in a white suit to direct us, and when we arrived at Garfield school the gentleman assigned to Nyssa met us, gave us our instructions and Rose Bowl tickets. The big show was almost on.

The junior varsity lost by an almost identical score of 68-34.

In the Vale game the Bulldogs showed an aversion toward the basket. They could not find the opening in the warm-up period and were naturally off on their shooting once the game got under way.

Two Weeks of Practice Lost

The team showed the effects of the two weeks' loss of practice due to the Rose Bowl trip. Five of the regulars were on the trip and it is understandable that the things they ate, the hours they slept and the miles they walked, did nothing to sharpen eyes or coordinate muscles for the Vale and Emmett contests.

Disciplinary measures for violation of training rules eliminated two of the team's regulars from the Emmett game. So the Bulldogs have started the new season with a rather unfortunate set of circumstances. Sometimes such a beginning brings out a determination to show the student body and town supporters that they are not a bunch of quitters.

On the other hand—well—let's wait and see.

It goes without saying, that on the basis of games played so far, Vale and Emmett are two of the outstanding teams of the conference. Ted Evans of Vale was hot and sank 22 counters for his team.

Mel Hyland, in addition to being a great defensive player and an accurate passer on setting up plays, was also able to sink 12 points.

The Bulldogs journey to Meridian Friday and on the following night will meet Weiser on the home court.

TVCC Chukar Game Set Friday in Nyssa

The Treasure Valley Community college Chukars will take to the basketball court this week for a pair of home games. On Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the Nyssa high school gym, the Chukars will host the Coyote Pups from the College of Idaho. The TVCC men will seek to make up for a previous 64-50 loss to the Caldwell team.

On Saturday night at 8 o'clock on the Ontario high floor, the Chukars will entertain the Northwest Nazarene JV's in a renewal of a hard-fought series that began last year.

With an improved 3-7 record so far this year, the Chukars have been led in scoring by Bob Hall of Huntington with 108 points; Bill Wilder of Caldwell, 153 points; and Paul Ables of Crane, 135 counters.
