 Gentlemen,

In 1913 and 1914, Miss Edith Hinkley taught in the Nyssa High School. Miss Hinkley now is the famed radiologist Dr. Edith Hinkley Quimby of New York and we wish to do a "profile" on Dr. Hinkley for Roche Medical Image, which we edit and which is distributed to about 170,000 physicians throughout the United States and Canada.

We would therefore appreciate your sending us any picture or text material of the then young science teacher, if any of the above are available. There is a good chance that some long-time resident of Nyssa or vicinity might have some interesting material.

Thank you for your help.
 Sincerely,
 Harold J. Randall

Attendance Drive At Nazarene Church Shows Gain Over '63

A five-week Sunday school attendance drive will climax this Sunday at the Church of the Nazarene, according to Pastor John Bullock. Sunday school classes were divided into four groups for the contest with each having a superintendent. Serving as heads of the various groups were Floyd Rhoades, Kenneth Saunders, Mert Winkle and Dwight Seward.

Teams headed by Saunders and Winkle emerged as winners and will be treated to ice cream by the losers during the church dinner to be held Sunday in the park.

Average attendance for the four Sundays was 186, showing a gain of 46 over the same time period last year.

Don Wilson, Sunday school superintendent, reports the local Sunday school is leading the district in outstanding growth.

CONGRESSMAN AL ULLMAN (D. Ore) is shown above right receiving a sign and posters for display in his congressional office promoting tourist travel to Oregon. The material was presented by James Gross, left, executive secretary of the National Association of Travel Organizations. Ullman's resolution authorizing President Johnson to issue a proclamation urging citizens to "see the United States and its Territories" passed Congress last week. White House signing ceremonies are scheduled and President Johnson is expected at that time to name a national chairman to head up the cooperative effort of government and industry. Ullman has indicated that the nationwide travel promotion will greatly benefit Oregon's economy and will acquaint more people with the scenic beauties and historic sites of the Pacific Northwest and the entire country.

IT'S YOUR LAW

By Oregon State Bar

JUST WHO OWNS RENTAL PROPERTY?

Dick rented a building for use as a butcher shop and had a large built-in refrigerator constructed in the building and removed old lights and installed costly fluorescent lighting fixtures.

Several years later he decided to move his shop. When he began to remove the walk-in refrigerator and fluorescent lights, the building owner objected.

"I own this building and everything that is part of it, including the built-in refrigerator and lights," he claimed.

"You must be crazy," Dick said. "I bought them and paid for their installation. How can they belong to you?"

Does the building owner have a legal claim to the property? Unfortunately, for Dick, he does, and will most likely be able to keep the refrigerator and lighting fixtures. The improvements Dick made had become part of the building and he can't remove them. The law considers such items as fixtures.

Dick could have protected himself by getting the landlord to agree in writing in the lease of the building that the tenant could remove fixtures he added to the building.

However, if there is no written agreement on who owns property added by the tenant and the landlord and tenant disagree whether the tenant can remove articles he added, the court will settle the dispute by applying the law of fixtures. The court will consider a number of factors, including the intention of the person who attached the articles to the building, the method of attachment and the damage its removal will do to the building.

Where removal of built-in articles will cause substantial damage to the building, they will normally be considered fixtures which must remain as part of the building.

Look at your refrigerator this way!

Does it provide ALL THE STORAGE SPACE YOU WOULD LIKE?

Chances are, if your refrigerator is more than five years old, storage space is inadequate for modern meal-planning. Most refrigerators in today's homes are of 8 to 10 cubic foot capacity. The most popular combination refrigerator-freezer size is 13 cubic feet with space for frozen foods as well as fresh. Yet the floor space it requires is the same!

MODERN LIVING CALLS FOR A MODERN REFRIGERATOR-FREEZER!

- ★ More storage space — fewer trips to the store
- ★ Always plenty of food on hand for guests, ever-hungry children
- ★ Stock up on specials — buy large, economy sizes
- ★ Cook and freeze entire meals ahead of time; when guests come — just heat and serve

Enjoy a modern NO-FROST refrigerator-freezer
