The cave, a half-mile long, with a quarter-mile long pond of dark, mysterious looking water, provides a large natural hall, reminiscent of the earliest days of Free Masonry. Exceptional acoustical properties allows everyone in attendance to hear with astonishing clarity. Grand Master of Masons in Oregon Earl T. Newbry and members of his official Masonic family will be in attendance. Past Grand Master Clarence Kopp will also be in attendance and will take part in the degree work. Dinner at 4 p.m. and a bountiful late supper on Saturday, plus a buckaroo breakfast Sunday morning after church services, will be served for a nominal charge of $5 by the host lodge. FARM BUREAU FURROW

I REMEMBER WHEN

Since my children regard me as an ancient, it set me wondering about just how many things I can remember in the agricultural line. Such memories have practically no value except perhaps to show how fast agriculture has progressed in Jack Benny's 39 years.

I remember when you bought eggs at the store you expected a few rotten ones to show up frequently. I remember when eggs were sold in a sack rather than a carton and they were picked out of a basket of straw in the store.

I remember when any food-stuffs became frozen they were thrown away because they were considered spoiled. I remember buying 25 cents worth of hamburger and telling the butcher, "Mom says to throw in a soup bone."

I remember buying milk in a syrup bucket before there was pasteurization and long before homogenized milk was even thought of by dairies.

I remember when it was considered the height of luxury to buy bread from a bakery at 10 cents a loaf.

I remember when all our fruit came in packages as dried fruit,

Mrs. Shell is establishing a kindergarten school and will begin classes on Sept. 14 in her home. Shell is fifth grade instructor in the Nyssa school system.

Dr. and Mrs. Maulding are residing temporarily at 401 North Sixth street, the house formerly occupied by Mrs. Rita Broers.

VISIT FROM KENNEWICK

Mrs. Jhelmar Schoen and sons of Kennewick were last Thursday overnight guests and Friday visitors of her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Schoen.

and a pocketful of dried prunes, apricots, apples or peaches was a great treat.

I remember when we bought sugar and flour in 100-pound bags and didn't know it came in smaller sizes.

I remember storing hams and bacon in the flax bin to keep them longer, and I remember gathering around the iceman to catch the chips from his ice pick on a hot summer day.

These things I remember since they all happened in the last 30 years, which goes to show what improvements have been made in this nation in three decades. In most nations of the world, people don't have to remember such things. They are still in vogue.
