Work Smarter . . . Not Harder

By BERNICE STRAWN, Extension Home Management Specialist

TEENAGERS

... we have a good word for you. Some people think you take less responsibility at home these days.

Mrs. Roberta Frasier, OSU extension family life specialist, gives this slant on the subject.

"Teenagers are not as free from chores as some people believe. As more mothers work outside the home, more youngsters take on housework, meal preparation and planning. Even in homes where the mother isn't working, today's teenagers are active helpers.

"A survey conducted in part of the state of Washington showed that more than a fourth of the boys helped with housework, meal preparation and washing dishes.

"The percentage of girls helping was much higher, with only 10 percent escaping housework. Eighty-four percent helped with meal preparation and washing dishes. Teenager home activities are not limited to cooking, housework and dishes, but this is the major activity."

THE NEW SMALL LAMPS

... which give high intensity light are designed for short periods of specialized use. They are convenient and make a lot of light for close work. If you're tempted to buy one for the children's study, think twice as they are not intended for prolonged desk work.

For study purposes, a lamp high enough and with a fairly large shade is needed to throw a wide circle of light over the desk. Look for the lamps which have the Better Light, Better Sight Study Lamp tag.

New on the market, these lamps made by several manufacturers, are scientifically designed to be easy on the eyes during prolonged reading.

YOUNG MOTHERS

... you can't be too careful when it comes to keeping poisons out of children's reach. Many useful ordinary household products can be poisonous if used incorrectly.

If you think "it can't happen here"—it has! Over 600 Oregonians were victims of poisoning last year. About two-thirds of these were pre-school children. Fortunately, the number of fatalities was low, but even one is too many.

Aspirin and pesticides were the chief causes of poisoning.

Amity Club Women Hear Summer Project Report

Mrs. Mel Beck entertained Friday evening for members of the Amity club. A Halloween theme was carried out in favors and decorations.
