Your PCA Credit Helps You Buy Labor-Saving Machinery

Farmers and stockmen use PCA loans to finance machinery that helps to increase production and cut costs. PCA—Production Credit Association—is a non-profit organization owned and operated by farmers and stockmen to provide dependable, low cost credit for farmers and stockmen. Here's how their loans work:

You have up to 7 years to repay capital improvement loans. Investments then pay for themselves with increased profits. Operating funds are budgeted for an entire year, and you have money any time you need it. Loan costs are lowest because you pay interest only on the money you actually use, and only for the time you use it. Your payments are credited first to principal, reducing the balance subject to interest, and lowering your interest costs.

To help you learn about PCA financing, let us give you a free booklet, "Budgeting for Profit." No obligation.
