

WHAT IS IT? Why, it's the rear end of Karma Kesler's 1965 Dodge Coronet, model "440." In fact, the round object is the cover to the gas tank — which is surrounded by twigs, straw, chicken feathers and other materials associated with a mother sparrow building her nest. The "bird home," containing five eggs, was discovered May 11 by an attendant at Howard's Texaco station as he started to fill the gas tank. The fair-feathered friend must have been a fast builder, because those who know Karma, know that she's a "go-go" girl, so it can't be too long between fillups. The bird must have entered the compartment each time through a small opening between the car and a lid to which the license plate is attached. When Karma went — the sparrow must have also "went along for the ride."—Staff Photo.

Journalism Class Visits Statesman

(From the NBS Bulldog)
 Twenty-two students from the journalism class traveled to Boise Thursday, April 21, to visit the Statesman newspaper plant. The class and Adviser Dale Schraufnagel left by bus at 8:30 a.m. and arrived at their destination at 11.
 At the Statesman, the students were divided into two groups to make the tour easier. An interesting feature of the newspaper office is a machine which picks up news stories all over the world. Students realized the importance of the editor's job in sorting out news stories to be used, since there is enough copy each day to fill three novels the size of "Gone With the Wind."
 Following the tour, the group was photographed on the steps of the Idaho capitol building. Students ate a hearty lunch and returned to school in time for their fifth and sixth period classes.
