Work Smarter . . . Not Harder

HOMEMAKERS—DO YOU FIND MOST PACKAGED FOODS

... too much for a meal for two? Mary Holthouse, OSU Extension food marketing specialist, offers these tips:

Some vegetables are frozen individually then packaged in bags. You can pour out just the amount you need at one time and keep the rest frozen.

Freeze half of a casserole dish, stew or meat loaf. It's a good idea to put it in a container that can be used to reheat it and save washing a pan.

For surplus bread, Miss Holthouse suggests Melba toast, French toast or bread pudding. Make crumbs from dry bread for dredging fish fillets, shrimp or meat before frying. Casserole dishes also call for crumb topping.

Leftover cooked meat or poultry may be sliced thin and used to top a tossed salad.

WHERE DO YOU BEGIN

... when you have a lot of clutter? One homemaker told us she put off doing anything about it because the job looked so overwhelming.

We suggested she remove everything from any two or three drawers. Then put back in orderly fashion only those things she used regularly. All other things were put in a box and carted off to the storeroom, just in case they were needed later.

Believe it or not, she now has one empty drawer out of the three. She'll continue to clear one cabinet at a time. In other words, "By the yard, life is hard; by the inch, it's a cinch."

"SLAVING OVER A HOT IRONING BOARD"

... may some day be an obsolete saying.

Mrs. Dorothy Brown, extension home furnishings specialist at Oregon State university, suggests that when you replace table linens, sheets, curtains, draperies and bedspreads you should consider those with a "durable press" finish. Already popular and practical for many garments, this finish on home furnishings looks promising as a wife saver.

A wedding gift of this type could prove to be a gift of time as a special bonus for the bride.

CLOTHES MAY LOOK CLEAN

... without being really clean if you take into consideration contamination by harmful bacteria.

A recent study of dry-cleaning processes made by microbiologists shows that some bacteria survive dry cleaning. However, most of them are killed during steam finishing and pressing. In such places as sleeves and pocket linings, some bacteria even survive pressing.

This might suggest that especially after illness, garments should be pressed. Many popular fabrics such as knits come through the cleaning process in good condition and you may feel they don't need further attention.

BRIDES (OR WIVES)

... if your husband says your cooking doesn't taste like his mother's—and you're doing it in a cast iron skillet—maybe the utensil needs seasoning.

Swab the inside of new cast ironware with melted vegetable fat or salad oil. Place in a warm oven (about 250° F.) for three hours or more. Apply more oil after the first hour. Let cool, wipe off excess grease with a paper towel. Then repeat the entire process before using.

If the skillet rusts, season it again. For information on care of all types of metals, ask your county extension agent for a free copy of our bulletin, "Care of Metals and Kitchenware."
