ONE OF THE UNITS in this year's Nyssa Nite Rodeo parade, July 8-9, was Neil Dimmick and two of his granddaughters, Leigh and Lynn Dimmick, daughters of Larry and Alene Ward Dimmick of Farmington, N.M. In old-time dress, the trio rides in a buggy, drawn by Sheik and Sabok of three-quarter Arabian descent. Sheik, with blaze face and white "socks," was recently treated for 9½ months at the Veterinary college in Pullman, Wash. After three operations for sinus trouble, doctors at the clinic called the animal's owner, Mrs. Dimmick, asking her to sign papers "to put him away," which she did—feeling that all possible medical efforts had been expended. The vets then determined that the horse had cancer, performed a fourth and final surgery and administered x-ray treatments. Then one day in November, Mrs. Dimmick received a welcomed phone call, and much to her surprise, the doctors stated that Sheik apparently was cured and appeared to be in A-1 condition. They gave no guarantee that, just as with human beings, the trouble would not recur. After paying the hospital bill, the Dimmicks brought Sheik home, and to date he seems to be in fine condition.
