CONFUSED ABOUT LAUNDERING GLASS FIBER
 . . . draperies? Some ads say they can be machine washed; others say to launder by hand always.

We asked Elaine Carlson, extension textile specialist at Oregon State university, to straighten us out. She says some of the new glass fibers, referred to as "Beta," are made of superfine glass yarn with good abrasion-resistance. Draperies and bedspreads made of this fiber can be machine washed.

But if you have the regular glass fiber materials, always treat them gently and wash by hand.

OSU Economist Says Oregon's Potato Outlook Better Than in Most Areas

A one-two spring and early summer punch by the weather has helped price and income prospects for Oregon potato growers, according to Stephen C. Marks, Oregon State university extension agricultural economist.

Marks says present signs are that Oregon potato growers will wind up digging somewhat more potatoes this fall than last, but it looks like growers' producing states may have to settle for short crops.

Yield prospects look as good as last year for most of Oregon's fall acreage, which is up four percent outside Malheur county. Malheur acreage is 16 percent larger, but yields promise to average lower so only a moderately larger crop is being harvested here.

National Fall Crop Smaller
 The OSU economist says the August crop report shows a U.S. fall crop down six percent from last year's all-time record despite a five percent boost in planted acreage. However, he points out that the anticipated 201 million sacks of fall potatoes would still top the 1960-64 average by six percent.

The decrease in U.S. production is centered in the central and western states. Present signs point to an eight percent larger crop in the making for the eastern states, but growers in the central states expect 15 percent less and the western crop appears to be 10 percent smaller.

Weather Hurts Many Areas
 Up to Aug. 1, the effects of adverse spring and early summer weather conditions were still being shown in many parts of the nation, Marks comments.

In the important eastern parts of Idaho, growers are experiencing one of the worst crop seasons on record. What happens there will influence Oregon potato prices.

Forecasts in early August were for average yields of only 150 sacks per acre, assuming normal growing conditions the rest of this season. Most of the size in fall potatoes is gained in August and September.

Final yield figures won't be known, of course, until harvest gets under way and the potatoes are actually out of the ground.

Grower returns also depend on quality, Marks emphasizes. Last season, an unusually large percentage of potatoes were thrown out because of poor quality. This helped hold prices up in face of an extra large crop.

FREEZING CAKE
 . . . for the party next week can be a last-minute time saver. But be sure to choose a frosting that will freeze.

Tests made by home economists at U.S. Department of Agriculture show that frostings made from egg whites and whipped cream fillings are not suitable for freezing.

Why I Hate Advertising

My name's Johnson. I'm a taxpaying American citizen and I hate advertising.

Take toothpaste. Since I was a pup I used the same toothpaste. So my wife reads ads about toothpaste that stops decay. Nothing will do but we use this new stuff. Sure, the kids don't have cavities any more but this new toothpaste sure doesn't taste to me like the old days. Thanks to advertising.

Take washing machines and dryers and all that jazz. These women read ads about saving work and time so they got appliances all over the place. I figure they haven't got enough to do anyway. Nuts to advertising.

If you want to get right down to it, take all this advertising my competition runs. These characters run ads with prices so low I got to run my own ads and practically give the stuff away. It's the only way I can get people in to buy my stuff. Advertising is a heck of a way to run a business.

Advertising is for the birds. It gives the customer all the breaks. Speaking for myself, the only time I ever read it is when I'm going to buy something and need to find out where I can get the best buy.

The only time it pays to be advertised at is when you're going to buy something.
