

Dr. J. J. Sarazin Compiles Historical Resume Covering Three Distinct Eras

and covered wagons were soon arriving by the thousands.

Most of those looking for homes came to Oregon, while some in search of gold went to Nevada or California. Millionaires were made overnight, but many mines began to "peter out," leaving ghost towns in their paths. So we began to see the end of the second era.

From the Lewis and Clark reports, we learned that we had, for the most part, an ideal climate. High, snow-covered mountains furnished a never-ceasing supply of water, and when applied to the desert soil, made a most productive land.

Agriculture Industry Develops

Some of the money made in early trapping and mining, along with government appropriations, was used for irrigation investigation and construction. So we have agriculture, a basic industry developing and joining the first and second eras to make more history.

Irrigation in Malheur county and eastern Oregon was first recognized as a possibility in 1900. A corps of U.S. engineers was sent to the area, but through misunderstanding, they got no further than to make a survey of the Malheur river.

They were practically driven out and labeled "brass-collared dogs of the government." One of the most successful projects at Twin Falls was developed shortly thereafter through private capital.

Surveys Made of Owyhee

Some of these men became interested and secured eastern and private capital to make extensive surveys of the Owyhee, spending many thousands of dollars. But due to some local opposition and failures of the bond market, the project was abandoned.

New Books Listed At County Library

"Churchill," taken from the diaries of Lord Moran. An account of the life of Winston Churchill from 1940 to 1965 by his physician.

"The Complete Illustrated Book of the Psychic Sciences" by Walter B. Gibson. A comprehensive history, modern survey and how-to-do-it instruction book for the psychic and mystic sciences.

"Metaphysics," edited by W. E. Kennick. A comprehensive introduction to the major problems of metaphysics and to the positions held by the leading philosophers in past and current history.

"Folklore in America," edited by Tristram P. Coffin. Tales, songs, superstitions and proverbs.

"A Folklore Reader," edited by Kenneth Clarke. Selections of and studies about folklore from the point of view of different disciplines, genres, periods by various writers and commentators.

"Prison Profiles" by Mark S. Richmond. A prison official explains the nature of offenders and the institutions which incarcerate them.

"U.S. Postage Stamps" by the Post Office department. An illustrated description of all U.S. postage and special service stamps through 1965.

"Animal Geography" by Wilma George. A description of the main distribution patterns of mammals and other land vertebrates over the world today and during the past years.

"The Red Man's West," edited by Michael S. Kennedy. True stories of the frontier Indians.

"Patchwork Quilts" by Beverly Colby. The author surveys briefly but with many illustrative diagrams the history and technique of traditional patchwork as an informative introduction to a series of plates of American and British quilt designs and patterns.

"Bottles of Bygone Days" by Donald E. Colcleaser. A book that illustrates 250 bottles and gives pertinent facts and approximate values of bottles sold by dealers.

"The Heretic" by Alison MacLeod. One of the lesser-known martyrs of Henry VIII's reign is the subject of a novel that pieces out obscure records with plausible deductions.

"Indian Summer" by John Knowles. A novel about an Air Force sergeant who goes to work for a powerful Irish Catholic family in Connecticut and who gets more closely involved than he had intended.

"A Tract of Time" by Smith Hempstone. A novel about Vietnam.

"The Ashes of Loda" by Paul Winterton. A novel of suspense.

"The Chinese Visitor" by James Eastwood. In a slight departure from the usual spy novel, England's secret agent is a voluptuous, beautiful and ruthless woman assigned to track down the mysterious Red Chinese behind the plot to destroy East-West relations.

IT'S YOUR LAW

OBLIGING TRUCK DRIVER NOT LIABLE FOR LOSS

Joe Independent owned a refrigerated truck and delivered ice cream and milk over a rural route he had built up.

He was an obliging fellow and often accommodated friends and customers by delivering without charge meat or other items that needed to be refrigerated, since such deliveries didn't interfere with his main business.

One day he was hauling 200 pounds of meat to town for a man on his route when the truck refrigeration unit broke down without any fault on Joe's part. The day was hot and the meat spoiled.

The man who was to receive the meat had already paid for it and he got angry at Joe, demanding that Joe pay him for the meat which had spoiled in the overheated truck.

Do you think Joe can be made to pay for the meat which spoiled in his delivery truck?

The answer is that Joe cannot be made to pay. Since he was hauling the meat for free, he would be considered a "gratuitous bailee" under the law. He owed the owner of the meat no duty other than that of not deliberately or maliciously damaging the meat.

Since Joe did not deliberately cause the refrigeration in his truck to break down or maliciously damage his own refrigeration unit, he could not be forced to pay for the spoiled meat.

FREE PROFIT GUIDE for . . . Farms and Ranches

The free booklet, "Budgeting for Profit", helps you plan for a successful year by anticipating your income and expenses in time to make the changes required to assure a satisfactory profit.

The booklet shows how a PCA loan tailored to your needs can buy labor-saving machinery or provide funds for paying your operating expenses as they become due.

PCA loans cost less because you pay interest only on the money you actually use, and only for the time you use it. Your payments reduce the balance subject to interest, lowering your loan costs greatly.

For full details and your free copy of "Budgeting for Profit", telephone, write, or visit us in person. No obligation, of course.

Booster Session Slated Sept. 15 By OT Grangers

Oregon Trail Grange meeting was held Thursday, Sept. 1, with Master Tom Jones presiding.

Plans for "booster night" were discussed and the date was set for Sept. 15 which is the next regular meeting. Area residents interested in grange work are invited to attend this open session.

Ira Price reported on the Pomona Grange meeting held recently at Vale. A report on the food concession stand and booth at Malheur county fair was given by Iva Adams and she also presented ribbons and checks won by grange entries.

Audrey and Evelyn Duff, assistant stewards escorted Clara Price, Don Somers and Eric Boening to the lecturer's station where they were fined one cent for each of their years.

James Stephen's name was drawn for the attendance award and he missed getting $5 by not being present. The prize will remain at that amount until someone claims it.

Twenty-two members were present for watermelon provided by the grange and served by Rommel and Marguerite Moss.

All members are urged to attend the next meeting and booster night program.

VISIT AREA RELATIVES

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Hursey, Scott and Steven of Fremont, Calif., were Saturday evening dinner and overnight guests of cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Bertram and Lucille. The Hurseys were Sunday breakfast guests of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Chet Sage. The three families went to Nampa during the afternoon to visit Mr. and Mrs. Chet Jamison and Bob and later had a picnic dinner in a Nampa park.
