

Time Changes Not Welcomed

While the travelers among us welcome the new Federal Uniform Time Act, which puts all but 4 states on daylight saving time between October 30th and October 29th this year, it is meeting some resistance...

mostly in states which observed daylight saving time only on a community-by-community or county-by-county basis. This kind of local option is ruled out now. The aim of the Act is to eliminate the kind of time confusion that existed, for example, along a 35-mile stretch of highway between Steubenville, Ohio and Moundsville, W. Va. A bus following that route went through seven different time changes within an hour.

Tree Industry Faces Crisis

"The Oregon timber industry faces a crisis in the immediate future as the log supply becomes increasingly scarce," stated Representative Robert F. Smith, Majority Leader of the Oregon House of Representatives, at the Oregon Forest Protection Association meeting at Cottage Grove today. "The lack of available logs will mean the closing down of countless mills and the resultant loss of thousands of jobs in our state unless the federal government acts immediately to increase the available timber supply." Smith told the assembled representatives of the Oregon lumber industry.

Smith, who served as chairman of the legislative Interim Committee on Public Lands for the 1965-66 biennium, and is Oregon's Representative on the Congressional Public Land Law Review Commission, told the group that "we are at the crossroads in our determination of the future available timber supply in Oregon. Our Interim Committee on Public Lands uncovered the Duerr Report which had been previously buried by the U.S. Forest Service and which showed projections for increases in the allowable cut of timber of up to 300% on public lands in Oregon. By all means we must use caution in implementing increases in the allowable cut, so as not to violate the principles of sustained yield or multiple use. But, it is becoming increasingly obvious that a great deal of timber is being left to rot in the woods and mills are being forced to close down because the allowable cut on federally-managed lands is pegged at a ridiculously low level."

Smith told the groups that the Interim Committee on Public Lands had "barely scratched the surface" of the allowable cut question and should make a detailed study resulting in specific policy proposals in the next biennium. He also suggested that the next Interim Committee should investigate the problem of lack of access roads on Forest Service lands, which results in an inability to implement sustained yield management programs on a basis of total effectiveness.

Chevrolet's room, ride and price. When Automotive News made its annual roominess study, Chevrolet got the most points. It's roomier inside, they reported, than any other American car. The ride is Full Coil suspension smooth! And Chevrolet hardtops and convertibles are still the lowest priced full-size cars of this kind you can buy. Chevelle's quick size. It's quick to climb, quick to turn. Other mid-size cars might be like Chevelle, true. But they're not as low priced. And they're not made by Chevrolet with Body by Fisher, GM-developed energy-absorbing steering column, inner fenders and Full Coil suspension. Camaro's road-hugging stance. At its price, Camaro is the only sportster to give you wide-stance design.
