Tips On Foil For Camping Given By OSU Specialist

Going camping? Simplify the cooking chore by using foil, suggests Marie Tribble, extension foods and nutrition specialist at Oregon State university.

If you stop at a store on your first day out, buy frozen vegetables. Place the contents of a package in the center of a square of freezer foil, season with butter or margarine, and wrap. Cook over the coals about 20 minutes.

If you put the package on the grill, allow about twice as much time for the vegetables to cook. Fresh vegetables can be cooked in foil too, the OSU specialist notes. Sweet corn, potatoes, onions and carrots are suitable for roasting. If you choose corn, remove the husks and wrap the ear with butter or margarine, salt and pepper, and roast about half an hour.

Sliced potatoes are a good basis for combination foil-cooked meals, says Miss Tribble. Top a hamburger with sliced potatoes, carrots and onions for a hearty meal. Or salt some potatoes, and add butter and grated cheddar cheese. Potatoes and onions, with seasoning and butter, make another good combination.

Slice potatoes about the same thickness, recommends Miss Tribble, so they'll cook evenly. Or grate potatoes and make a hashed brown patty with a bit of onion and seasoning. Put them on to cook at least half an hour before meal time.

A quicker dish, good with broiled ham or grilled fish, is a whole onion, or tomato halves with an onion slice between, wrapped separately and grilled about 20 minutes.

If there's no freezer foil on hand, Miss Tribble says, use two thicknesses of regular foil. Be sure the packages are tightly wrapped, and there are no holes in the foil.

In Appreciation
