

Jest Jokes

The new student at the barber college was having a bad day, and his hands grew more unsteady by the hour. The climax came when he had the misfortune to cut the customer's cheek in several places as he shaved him.

The patient man took all these gasps in stoical silence, but when the shave was over he gravely went to the drinking fountain, took a mouthful, and with tightly compressed lips proceeded to shake his head from side to side.

'What's the matter?' inquired the barber. 'Have a toothache?'

'Toothache? No!' muttered the poor man. 'I'm just trying to see if my face will hold water without leaking.'

A census taker asked a woman how many children she had. 'Well,' she began, 'there's

Billy, and Harry, and Martha, and--'

'Never mind the names,' he interrupted, impatiently, 'just give me the number.'

The mother became indignant. 'They haven't got numbers; they've all got names.'

Historians tell us that women used cosmetics in the Middle Ages. For that matter, women in the middle ages still use them.
