Jest Jokes

Manager (returning suddenly): "What are you doing with your feet up on the desk?"
Resourceful Clerk: "I have been too busy to look for an eraser, so I've had to use my rubber heels."

She had begged her husband for months to have his picture taken. At last he decided to go through the agony and made the appointment with the photographer. But when the proofs arrived, his wife exclaimed in horror, "Oh, there's only one button on your coat!"
"Thank heavens," he said, "you've noticed it at last."

Customer: "Tell me honestly now, is there any real surefire cure for dandruff?"
Barber: "Oh, yes, indeed! It's an application invented by a Frenchman named Guillotine."

When a certain young man grew tired of working for others, he went into business for himself. Later a friend asked him how it was to be his own boss.

"I don't know," he replied. "The police won't let me park in front of my own place of business; tax collectors tell me how to keep my books; my banker tells me how much balance I must maintain; freight agents tell me how my goods must be packed; customers tell me how my goods must be made; federal, state, county and local agencies tell me how to keep records; the union tells me who I can work, and how, and when; and on top of all that, I just went broke!"

A pedestrian was waiting to cross the street when a huge Saint Bernard dog came by and knocked him into the street. As he was trying to get up a small foreign car came by and ran over him. A passer-by rushed up and asked him if he was hurt.

The man replied, "I didn't mind when that dog knocked me over, but that tin can tied to his tail nearly killed me."

A farmer harvested some popcorn and hauled it to town with his mule team. The sun was so hot, he unhitched the mules to feed them. When he returned from lunch the corn started to pop. The mules thought it was snowing, and they froze to death.

Be bold in what you stand for, but be careful what you fall for.

Tails of Woo

appeared. It was not impossible to come down, but it was quite painful.

And then there was the story of the "side hill goats". They could only run around a hill, as the legs on one side were longer than on the other. The trouble was that some of them had long right legs and some had long left legs, so you could not tell which way they would come around the hill.

The only escape from them was to run up the hill. We were cautioned that if we heard any strange noises we should start running up.

We did hear a strange noise and investigated. It was a sheep herder under a rimrock, making a very wierd noise. Shepherders are supposed to be shy a few marbles which they lose by trying to tell the long way of their quilts when they make their beds.

Knowing these conditions, we decided he was acting under natural causes. Later we found he was trying to imitate a goat at us. A sheepherder can lose several marbles and still be a good shepherd, but if he loses too many, he has to be taken away from the sheep and given some job that does not require thinking, such as punching cows, teaching school or best of all, being elected to congress.

There were many more such incidents, but they all happened long before we were in the eighth grade, but knowing many of these "jokers" of long ago, no one can say for sure what he would do if they started working on him, regardless of his age.

Generally speaking a woman is generally speaking.
