J. Ford Named OEA Community College Head

Jeff Ford, faculty member at Treasure Valley Community college, was installed as president of the Department of Community Colleges for the Oregon Education Association at the March 11-12 annual convention.

Although there are less than 100 members throughout Oregon, Ford reports that growing interest is indicated because the other professional organizations in the state have done very little in regard to classroom instruction.

He further stated that the course of action for the Department of Community Colleges during this year will be the opening of dialogue among all members of Oregon's two-year schools.

DENNIS ORR JR.

Nyssa High School officials have recently been informed that Dennis Orr Jr. has been chosen as recipient of a $350 scholarship to attend an interesting summer program entitled Northwest Outward Bound. This program is related to the world-renown schools in operation all around the globe.

Outward Bound Schools are non-profit educational institutions supported by paid tuition and contributions from industries, foundations and individual donors. The Outward Bound program is committed to developing in students a sense of purpose and a strong desire for achievement and involvement in something larger than themselves.

Goals of the Outward Bound program are achieved by exposing young men to severe physical challenge by pitting them against a constant and impartial nature. The program is composed of a number of physical obstacles that are set up in wilderness environment to prepare the boys for a solo trip into the wilderness area of the Cascade mountains to test their ability to survive.

Seed Certification Fee Changes Noted; Poundage Charge Noted

The first increase in the fees charged for certification of seed crops in Oregon since 1955 has been announced by the Seed Certification Board at Oregon State University.

Don Brewer, extension seed certification specialist, said some adjustments in acreage fees have been made and a poundage fee of 4 cents per hundred instituted. A fee of 2 cents per tag will be charged for lots bagged in sacks of 25 pounds or less.

A fee of 6 cents per tag will be charged for crops grown under the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) plan for growing foreign varieties for reshipment to Europe.

Acreage fees are 70 cents per acre for alfalfa, clover, crownvetch, trefoil vetch and all grasses other than ryegrass; 50 cents for Linn ryegrass; and 60 cents for other ryegrass.

Hybrid corn will carry a $2 per acre fee and small grain will be inspected for 80 cents an acre. All acreage fees will carry a $5 minimum. Seedling inspections, regardless of acreage, will be $5 per field and annual stolen bed inspections will be $10.

Brewer said that the cost of performing seed certification procedures has gone up 154 per cent since the last fee increase, but that some of the costs were absorbed by increasing efficiency in the operation. The poundage fee was initiated as a means of spreading fees among growers so those with the highest yields will pay their fair share of the costs of tags, seals and labor of sampling and tagging, Brewer explained.

He noted that the seed certification program does not operate on state funds, depending entirely on fees collected from participating growers.

Signup deadlines for certified seed crops are as follows:

Arrowleaf clover, crimson clover, crownvetch, meadow foxtail and vetch, May 1; tall fescue, orchardgrass, reed canarygrass, ryegrass, May 15; bentgrass, bluegrass, bromegrass, fine fescue, hardinggrass, tall oatgrass, timothy, wheatgrass and stolon beds, June 1; alfalfa, red clover, white clover, birdsfoot trefoil, hybrid corn and small grain, July 1; and Sudangrass, Aug. 1.

Seedling inspections must be made within 60 days of planting.

Kid Stuff

Heating water is child's play for natural gas. It's made for the job, that's why. Natural gas is the fast-action fuel. It heats instantly—then retreats instantly. Does its job quickly, then withdraws with the same speed. Compare this performance with "flameless" energy. For example, while you're waiting for an electric range to boil water, you're already pouring it from a gas range. While you're waiting for an electric burner to cool, a natural gas burner returns to zero at once. The very nature of natural gas — heat fast, cool fast — means better performance at lower cost. Because of this quality in the fuel, a 40-gallon gas water heater will do the work even better than a 66-gallon electric one. You pay less for the equipment, you pay less for the fuel consumed. Can you beat it?
