Wallace Prowell of Nyssa Christian church and the Rev. Ralph A. Lawrence of the local Methodist church. The collection center, where the truck will stop Monday, May 20 is the same location. CASE HISTORY

You may be interested in a hassle they had in Fort Orchard, Washington a few months back. Officials at the South Katsap High School there let it be known that they were considering installing a full automated cafeteria. That brought out the populace. The youngsters wouldn't get balanced meals, they said; the lunch would be cold, and not the needed hot food and, heaven help us, the school would lose its federal lunch-room assistance payments.

But, the officials went ahead. That federally assisted hot lunch program wasn't really a howling success anyway, since only about 20 percent of the 1,135 students used the lunchroom at noon. It took five cooks to prepare the meals, and even with federal assistance the losses were staggering. So what happened?

The school cafeteria looks and operates like an automat. There's a wide variety of food available, far beyond anything possible under the federally assisted program: hot soup, pastries, ice cream, beverages, hot dogs and hamburgers as well as assorted cold sandwiches, freshly baked cookies and cake, and a daily special. Students pop a coin into a slot and take their choice. Three times as many students use the cafeteria at lunchtime. There's less waste and spilling in the cafeteria. The official lunch period has been shortened. Two cooks do what five used to do.

More important, school officials have found it worth while to keep the cafeteria open most of the day. Many pupils have breakfast in the cafeteria before the school day begins, and many others pop in for between classes snacks. When there are after-school activities, the cafeteria is a meeting place.

About the balanced meals -- hear what the school's principal has to say on that: "You talk about balanced meals. We used to see the pupils eating part of their hot lunch and throwing the rest away. I think everyone likes to pick and choose from a variety. This way, the pupil picks what he likes and doesn't waste any."

Federal assistance? Who needs it? Patronage is up 300 percent without it. - U.S. Press Association.

Church World Service Truck To Pick Up Clothing Monday

Used and new clothing which will go to Church World Service is to be picked up early Monday morning May 20, at the United Methodist church located at the Corner of Third street and Emison avenue in Nyssa.

Contributions should be taken to the above designated church by Sunday, May 19. Clothing should be cleaned, mended, boxed and securely tied.

When leaving the garments, a deposit slip should be filled out and the pink slip left at the United Methodist church. Ten cents per pound should be sent with the yellow slip to the address indicated on it. Money should not be put with the boxes. The white slip should be kept for church records.

Last December over 1,400 pounds of clothing and over $140.00 in money was donated. The 10¢ per pound is for handling, transportation and insurance.

This clothing is used throughout the world wherever there may have been disasters of earthquake, fire, flood or war. Within a few short hours a tonload of clothing is on its way following a natural disaster somewhere in the world.

In 1967, there were over 300 such disasters. The CWS clothing helps in these cases.
